Pullman's Birthday

Einstein on Religion

When a Grizzly Is Shot

A Real Gas Fight

By Arthur Brisbane

LOS ANGELES, March 3—Today, the 100th anniversary of the birth of George M. Pullman, father of the American sleeping car, important to the whole world, is to be celebrated with a dinner here. Many interested in the Pullman organization, including George M. Pullman's youngest daughter, Harriet, now Mrs. Arthur F. Schemerhorn, age to attend.

George M. Pullman, one of the great benefactors of his country, added strength and value to the lives of important men. There should be many monuments erected in his honor, inscribed on each a line from the Psalms: "He giveth His beloved sleep."

Hopi Indians of the Grand Canyon, Arizona, have adopted Professor Einstein, giving him for a tribal name, "The Great Relative," as tribute to his "relativity" theory. In spite of his pathetic struggles, it seems impossible for Professor Einstein to keep out of the limelight or avoid publicity.

Clergymen everywhere will be interested in Professor Einstein's recent disquisition on the gradual development of religion and the nature of God.

Religion started in fear. Savage men imagined a powerful being, vengeful, dangerous like themselves, and they tried to placate him with sacrifices, including human sacrifices.

That was the "religion of fear."

This fear, says Professor Einstein, developed a priesthood "claiming to mediate between the people and the being they feared, then attaining a position of power."

Then "a leader, despot or a privileged class combined the functions of the priesthood with temporal rule."

Later God was looked upon as men look upon their parents, punishing evil, rewarding good deeds.

Thus began a religion of "Providence."

It is very interesting to read Dr. Einstein's description of gradual changes in religion. Concerning his own religion, that of the Jews, he says, "It is easy to follow in the sacred writings of the Jewish people the development of the religion of fear into the moral religion, which is carried further in the New Testament."

There is another religious emotion, according to Einstein, of which "only exceptionally gifted individuals or especially noble communities are capable." This third level of religious experience he calls, "The cosmic religious sense."

Like relativity, the cosmic religious sense is a little difficult for the average man, because "it does not involve an anthropomorphic idea of God," namely the imagining of God as an individual with a beard and clothes like a man.

Prof. Einstein agrees with Schopenhauer that the Buddhists possess more of the genuine cosmic quality than the Christian or Jewish religion.

And in that "cosmic religion" such personalities as Democritus, Saint Francis of Assisi, and Spinoza, the Jewish philosopher, are near to one another.

It is a little "highbrow" for the average individual, who clings to his "anthropomorphic" idea and wants a God who can be called "Our Father," not one in a fourth or fifth dimension.

In this column the fact was mentioned that the first three or four months of 1931 would find Wall Street gentlemen worried, as unpleasant reports of "earnings" or the lack of them were made public.

When a grizzly bear is shot in the heart he runs on some distance, not knowing what has happened. When he finds himself sitting down he is startled, and then dead.

Fortunately nothing in this country is dead, but some things were badly shot and wounded during 1930. As the year comes out, the fact that the worst is over does not prevent exaggerated fear.

Yesterday Wall Street was sick because actual figures of diminished railroad receipts were made public. And to that was added a worrying rumor that Mr. Mellon would resign on March 4.

What looks like a real gasoline war is on here. The price has been cut already 12½ cents, from 20 cents and higher. Another two-cent cut is predicted. It is believed that some of the big companies mean to take in hand the irresponsible gentlemen that have made the oil industry chaotic.

Mr. Cord, youthful head of the Auburn Automobile Co., who includes the Stinson Air Lines and building of airships in his activities, says that so

GARRETTS GO ON TRIAL TOMORROW

Judge Bishop Assigned to Preside; State Has Four New Witnesses, Fresh Evidence

Judge Elias Bishop was definitely named today to preside at the second trial of Oliver B. Garrett, which starts tomorrow in Suffolk Superior Court.

With Mrs. Garrett and Miss Lillian V. Hatch, the former liquor raider again faces charges of conspiracy in connection with alleged gratuities while he was a police officer.

Four new state witnesses and considerable new evidence have been obtained by Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederick T. Doyle, who will conduct the case, aided by Joseph Sullivan, newly appointed member of Dist. Atty. William J. Foley's staff.

FOUR NEW WITNESSES.

Sullivan, then an outside attorney, conducted much of the investigation and gathering of evidence for the first trial, but Daniel J. Gillen appeared with Doyle in court. Gillen has been assigned to the vice cases.

Forester Ware and Minnie Carrier, both of Rockland; William J. Days of Dorchester and Margaret Innis of Back Bay are the new witnesses summoned by the State.

Forty others listed to testify include Police Superintendent Michael H. Crowley, Deputy Superintendent James McDevitt, Capts. Michael Goff and John McGrath, and Police Stenographer Augustus Gill.

Assistant District Attorney Doyle announced today the trial would be held in the same courtroom as the first. Much of the bulky evidence will be discarded and every arrangement will be made to speed the new trial, he said.

CHALLENGES REDUCED

Most of the first day is expected to be devoted to the selection of a jury from a panel of 108 veniremen. A panel of 72 others will be available if the first is exhausted.

Defense and State will be allowed 12 challenges each, a drop of six from the last trial, due to the quashing of some of the indictments.

Garrett is in his third month at Charles st. jail, having surrendered Dec. 1 after defaulting last June when the first trial was originally scheduled.

Mrs. Garrett and Miss Hatch are both out on bail, the former completely recovered from a heavy cold that several times halted the last trial.

Defense counsel declined to reveal whether or not they intended to call any new witnesses. The defense attorneys will be the same, however, Herbert F. Callahan for Garrett and Daniel J. Gallagher for the two women.

Zeppelin Will Fly Over Holy Land

Friedrichshafen, Germany, March 3 (INS)—The "Graf Zeppelin," Germany's airship, will start on a trip to the Holy Land at the end of April, it was announced here.

The proposed trip to the North Pole has been abandoned for 1931 owing to financial difficulties, but an Arctic trip as far as Franz Joseph Land may be made.

Mystery in Pickford Party Row

Hollywood, Cal., March 3 (INS)—Who struck who—and what for—at a party at the Embassy Club Saturday night was a general topic of discussion at the film colony today.

In another part was Myron Selznick, actor's agent.

One version had it that William Bakewell, youthful actor, became embroiled in an argument with Selznick while dancing with Mrs. Chalif, Miss Pickford's cousin.

Another version had it that Bakewell and Selznick had merely indulged in a bit of friendly horseplay.

RIOT IN CAPITOL OF NEW YORK

Albany, N. Y., March 3 (AP)—Shouting and tumult amounting to a small riot by 200 demonstrators for the unemployed brought the Assembly to a halt shortly after the session began today.

State troopers seized demonstrators by the dozen and ejected them from the chamber while others in the galleries shouted and waved their arms.

When troopers started to clear the galleries some Communists showed fight. Troopers swung their clubs vigorously and at the end of 10 minutes had evicted the disturbers.

Capt. J. F. Keely was cut about the head and face. It is believed his assailant was wearing brass knuckles.

William Bell, a page, went to the assistance of a trooper who had been knocked down and was, himself, struck over the head with a stick carried by one of the rioters.

The disturbance started when the clerk began routine reading of legislative business. His voice was drowned by a shout from a man in the rear of the assembly chamber who said he wanted to speak "in behalf of the children that are hungry."

The movement of troopers toward the individual was a signal for the beginning of shouts from the demonstrators.

While the demonstration was proceeding in the assembly chamber, another group of unemployed was holding a mass meeting on the steps of the Capitol. They were joined by their fellows who had been ejected from the building.

Sophie Tucker Booed by Paris Audience

Paris, March 3 (AP) — The customers booed Sophie Tucker's act when she came on at the Empire Theater last night and the entertainer who had scored a triumph in earlier appearances walked off followed by hisses.

5 GET CHANCE TO GIVE UP IN FRAUDS

Others of 15 Indicted in N. E. Investors Case Sought Outside Bay State

Five of the 15 persons secretly indicted yesterday by the grand jury in connection with the alleged $8,000,000 fraud of the New England Investors Shares, Inc., will be permitted to surrender tomorrow in Superior Court, it was announced today.

Announcement came following a conference of Atty.-Gen. Joseph E. Warner, Asst. Atty.-Gen. Louis J. Sawyer and Police Inspector John Mitchell at the State House.

The attorney-general's office is also attempting to get in communication with several men outside Massachusetts, with an offer to allow them to surrender.

If this is found impossible, or the offer is declined, extradition papers and warrants will be served on them. They are among the 15 indicted.

SOLD ON INSTALLMENTS

The indictments are understood to charge fraud in that it was the practice of the corporation to sell "units" for $10,000 or $11,000, usually on the installment plan, guaranteeing to the purchasers holdings of well-known and reputable concerns.

Professional men and women, school teachers and others lost their payments and interest, ranging from $2000 to $8000 each when the company went into the hands of a receiver. The corporation's assets have never been checked satisfactorily, but it is understood the fail $8,000,000 short of the liabilities.

SWIFT IS WITNESS

In the Grand Jury investigation James M. Swift of Fall River, former state attorney-general and understood to have been interested in the corporation, was one of the witnesses.

Another was Edmund H. Talbot former Boston lawyer and listed at one time as an executive of the

HAMMER BOY MODEL SOLDIER, TOO

Russell Noble, Haverhill schoolboy, held in $51,000 bail as the hammer attacker of Mrs. Clara E. C. Ellis, wealthy society woman, is shown here as he appeared as a member of the citizens' military training camp at Fort Adams, R. I., in 1929. At the camp young Noble was a member of Battery H, assigned to coast artillery work. This picture of young Noble in khaki was taken from a group photograph of the members of battery. He was one of the leading members of the outfit. Now, with soldier life behind, he awaits trial in the hammer attack case.

Haverhill, March 3—As defense attorneys, hinting at a surprise, were shrouding their plans in mystery, investigation of the alleged hammer attack by 17-year-old Russell Noble on Mrs. Clara E. Ellis, who is dying, took a sudden new turn today.

The accused boy started to write a book about the crime between the time of the attack and his arres, the authorities learned.

Police expressed the belief that this indicates he may have been trying to commit a "perfect crime," after the manner of Leopold and Loeb in Chicago. It gives the case "an entirely different psychological slant," they asserted.

His beginnings of the book were made in the reading room of the Public Library and the investigators have his notes.

The idea of a "perfect crime" they stated, would consistently dovetail with his admitted motive of robbery of the wealthy widow, and other possible incentives, as yet unrevealed.

FACES SANITY TEST

Young Noble's class accounts at Haverhill High school were found today to be short $40.75, according to announcement by Principal Alexander I. Clow.

His accounts as treasurer of the Young Peoples' Society at the First Church of Christ are being examined, Rev. George E. Cary stated.

"We have only just begun to fight," was the only statement of Atty. Richard J. McCormick, leader of defense lawyers.

Repudiation of the confession looms as one of the early moves, it is understood, and sooner or later there will be an examination of the boy by an alienist.

Specialists consulted at the bedside of Mrs. Ellis at Benson Hospital in Dix Forecnoon, discussing emergency measures to try to save her life. Her condition has reached an extreme crisis.

POWDER BLAST ROCKS TOWN

Millers Falls, Mass., March 3 (AP)—Twenty barrels of gunpowder solution and gun cotton in a truck exploded in the center of this town today, and the driver and his helper escaped uninjured.

Warned by the explosion of one barrel, the two men leaped from the truck and were just out of range when the entire load blew up. Police arrived after the men had departed, and, from residents who were awakened by the blast, learned that the driver's name was Gelvin.

The truck bore an address in Tyler st., Boston. The explosive had an estimated value of $2000, and was consigned to Brattleboro, Vt., from Boston.

St. Godard First Off in 200-Mile Derby

The Pas, Man., March 3 (AP)—Seeking a clean sweep of the 1930 dog racing season, Emil St. Godard, America's premier musher, today jumped away to an early lead in the 200-mile non-stop derby over the winding trail to Flin Flon and back.

Plunges to Death in Panic

George Coffee, 29, a lodger at 93 West Springfield st., South End died at City Hospital today from injuries suffered when he leaped from the third-story window of the house to escape fire caused by an exploding oil stove.

Coffee never regained consciousness after he fell to the sidewalk. He suffered a fractured skull, internal injuries and lacerations.

Bank Bandit Makes Victims Shed Pants

Montreal, Que., March 3 (INS)—A lone bandit held up a branch bank here today and escaped with $1000 after forcing the manager and several clerks to take off their trousers so they would not pursue him.

The bank was the Christopher Columbus and Mt. Royal ave branch of the Bank of Montreal. After taking the money and demanding that the clerks remove their trousers the man fired three shots into the air and walked away.

GAS TAX RISE IS APPROVED

An increase of one cent in the gasoline tax to start May 1 and run to 1934, was favored today by the legislative Committee on Ways and Means.

The increased tax will be used to defray the cost of the proposed $1,500,000 building for the department of public works, and to finance the big road construction program called for by Governor Ely through a bond issue. In addition the cities and towns would be relieved of the $2,000,000 assessment for state road construction.

Archduke Albrecht's Wife Awaits Stork

Vienna, March 3 (AP)—Mme. Irene von Lehibach, the wife for whom Archduke Albrecht waived his rights to the Hungarian throne, was said today to be expecting accouchement soon. King Alfonso of Spain, who is Albrecht's uncle, was understood to be prepared to act as godfather to the child. There is wide discussion as to whether the baby would be proclaimed an archduke or an archduchess, since Hungarian laws do not recognize Morganatic marriages.

widow, which occurred early Thursday morning, and at taking notes from many newspaper clippings about the case, according to two library attendants.

He talked so much about it that Miss Mary Davis, I charge of the reading room, had to ask him to please desist.

TALKED ABOUT CRIME

When he first entered, Miss Davis and Miss Dorothy Woodman, another library employe, were talking about the case, but when he asked them what they looked so "glum" about, Miss Davis said:

"We're discussing something which we feel wouldn't be proper to talk about before a boy of your age and character."

Nobody was more surprised than they were when the boy was arrested and confessed to the crime.

Police officials say that apparently the boy was trying to sound out as many persons as he could for their reaction to the crime. He talked with a local gardner about it, it is alleged, when police knew little about it, then delved, having just been called into the case.

He is said to have referred to the case as "a murder" in discussing it prior to his arrest.

Investigators now believe that instead of getting inspiration for wrongdoing from murder mysteries and detective stories, he studied them for hints on how to avoid leaving clues.

They pointed out that in "perfect crime" cases there is almost always a more practical motive. The accused lad confessed he was after $16 to pay for class photographs and to make up a shortage in his class funds, the latter amounting to $6, he said.

WAS MODEL PUPIL

Disclosing that the shortage actually is $40.75, Principal Clow said today:

"Russell was collector for his room and had collected $63.75, according to receipts given the pupils. He turned in $23. The collections were for the graduating class book and banquet, and he was the most energetic collector in his class.

"Receipts show that he took amounts ranging from 25 cents to $1, starting last September. He was appointed because of his ability as a student and because he was the type of boy we all trust.

"It is really too bad that he did not come to me and tell me of the shortage. I had a particular fondness for that boy. I had known him for years, even before he came to high school.

"He had the qualifications of a boy whom I believed would go far in life. If he had come to me, and offered restitution, I would have advanced him the money out of my own pocket, and nobody in school or outside would have known anything about it.

"I think I could have put him on the right road. Of course, boys are reluctant to come to their headmaster just at the times when they most need to."

In confirming a report that the accused boy's treasureship accounts of the Young Peoples Society at the First Church of Christ Congregational, were being scrutinized, Rev. Mr. Cary said:

"If a shortage is discovered I will then decide for myself whether the fact that shall be made public."

Atty. Richard J. McCormick, defense leader, went to Lawrence jail for a long conference with the "model boy," Sunday school teacher and star high school pupil, held in $51,000 bail as the alleged attacker of the wealthy widow.

"Is she still alive?"

This is the boy's first question for every relative or friend who visits him, but to jail guard and other "outsiders" he is coolly indifferent.

Rev. George E. Cary, the accused youth's pastor, after a talk with Attorney McCormick, talked of the possibility of young Noble's being "mentally unbalanced," but the lawyer refused to discuss this or other features of the case.

Adding to the general air of mystery, State detectives were energetically questioning new figures in the case today and requestioning others, seeking, it is believed, to try to explain various puzzling aspects.

A curious fact uncovered was that on New Year's Eve, Mrs. Ellis gave a playlet in her home for a party of society friends, in which she was the victim of a murder plot. A shoe manufacturer was the slayer."

Mrs. Ellis, still in a coma at Bensa n Hospital, was weakly fighting infection today, and doctors have all but despaired of saving her life.

There was a consultation at the bedside several hours after her brother, George Kimball Clement, had been called to the sick room to be with her in case she died suddenly, for her relapses have been swift and alarming.

CHECK BANK BOOKS

A report on fingerprints photographed i the room where the attack took place was expected today from Capt. Charles Van Amburgh of the state police. The photographs were made by J. Warren Toelken, assistant to Capt. Van Amburgh.

Authorities plan also to check Mrs. Ellis' bank account to learn if she withdrew money on Wednesday, the day before the attack.

In his confession, the boy said he took nothing but a watch. The woman's purse was found at the foot of the bed with only a little change in it, and a friend is reported to have told the police that on the night before, when making a contribution of $10 to charity, Mrs. Ellis had several other bills.

Plans of Rev. Cary to raise a ball fund among members of the First Church of Christ, Congregational, of Bradford, have been abandoned temporarily, the clergyman announced today. He prefers to await a mental examination of the boy before procuring his release.

IGNORES JAIL MATES

Word received from Keeper George Bunting of the jail at Lawrence, where Noble is confined in a small cell on the second tier of the east wing, was that he pays no attention to his fellow prisoners and ignores their attempts to exchange magazines and papers with him.

The boy has been supplied with all the newspapers and has read about his case, but he made no comment. He is eating heartily and has had frequent visitors, so many that Keeper Bunting today had to limit these callers.

"He appears perfectly normal to me," said Bunting. "But he won't have anything to do with the other inmates, most of whom are charged with crimes much less serious than his."

Relatives and friends of the boy, who was considered a paragon among the young people of Haverhill until he made a confession to the police of attacking Mrs. Ellis, are said to pin their hopes on the fact that Mrs. Ellis may not have recognized her assailant.

"No, we haven't been able to raise the bail for Russell," said Rev. Mr. Cary today. "After a talk with his lawyer last night and this morning, and also with other persons, I feel perhaps after all the boy is better off for the present in jail.

"I have been thinking it all over. We haven't abandoned him, but I am not so sure the boy is not mentally unbalanced. Perhaps a temporary condition. It requires scientific determination."

State detectives questioned Ralph Spofford, a gardener employed on an estate on Westland ter. today, concerning his report that young Noble talked with him about an attack on Mrs. Ellis last Thursday noon, almost before the police knew about it.

DISCUSSED ATTACK.

They went carefully over the story with Spofford, who said he was driving along South Main st. when he was hailed by Noble, whom he knew well.

The boy asked him if he had heard about an attack at the Ellis home, and the gardener replied he had not, whereupon, according to Spofford, Noble discussed certain details of the case.

Spofford did not learn until yesterday that this was prior to any public announcement of the facts by the police who at the time of the conversation were only just beginning to look into the report of an attack on Mrs. Ellis.

As soon as he realized the significance of his information, Spofford told the police and Detectives Ferrari, Stokes and Griffin went to him first today, when they began a new round of inquiry.

They also questioned Kare Brackett, the florist for whom Russell sometimes worked, and from whose shop he admitted taking a pair of pliers with which he cut the telephone wires before breaking into the widow's house.

Mr. and Mrs. Brackett both told the officers that the boy appeared pale and "did not seem to be himself" when he reported for work Thursday, the morning after the attack. They asked him about his condition and he laughed it off.

Mrs. Brackett said he seemed to be limping. He told her, she said, that a dog had bitten him a few days before and the wound had been cauterized. Before reporting for work he had telephoned that he would be late.

IN TRAINING CAMP

Besides the various jobs he did, the accused boy took part in numerous activities of the young people of the city. A few summers ago he attended Y. M. C. A. camp at Becket in the Berkshires, and in 1929 was a member of Battery H of the Citizens' Military Training Camp at Fort Adams, Newport, R. I.

"Did you go to her house because she was rich?" the boy was asked.

"Possibly," he replied.

The spirit of the high school youth was in marked contrast to the enthusiasm of his lawyers. Russell seemed resigned to his fate.

"I've got to take what's coming to me, I guess," the boy said to relatives who visited him at Lawrence jail, to which he was transferred following his arraignment in Haverhill District Court yesterday.

TRIED OTHER THEFT

Young Noble felt the signing of his alleged confession sealed his fate, but his lawyers look on his case differently.

The police did not disclose until late yesterday that in his alleged confession, Noble admitted that he had attempted to break into a neighboring mansion before he went to invade the Ellis home at 1:45 a. m. Thursday.

The first house he tried, according to the police, was the home of Voe Day, 42 Summer st. The family is away and, for some reason not disclosed by the authorities, the boy who turned burglar

Heard's Radiogram Asks for News of Widow's Condition

Maj. Ralph T. Heard sent a radiogram from the steamship which is carrying him to South America, asking about the condition of Mrs. Clara E. Ellis, victim of the hammer assault. The radiogram was received in Haverhill last night by George Kimball Clement, brother of the patient.

HAMMER BOY STOIC IN JAIL

Lawrence, March 3—Although a turbulent week-end swept Russell Noble suddenly from his high school classrooms to a small, gray cell in the county jail here, he is stoical, indifferent, outwardly unchanged.

Only when relatives call on him, and he asks whether his alleged hammer victim is alive or dead, does he give any sign of realizing the seriousness of his plight.

While his schoolmates, among whom he was a leader, went to and from their classes at Haverhill, eight miles away, the 17-year-old boy with the curly blond hair and quiet smile sat reading magazines and newspapers telling about his case.

SPURNS JAIL MATES

"Why, you would never know there was an unusual guest in the jail," said Keeper George Bunting. "The boy is apparently indifferent and ignores his jailmates who are trying to get a good look at the immature lad whose alleged crime is so much worse than their own.

"He is in a cell in the second tier of the east wing—that's the jail wing, you know, the other part of this institution being the House of Correction for sentenced prisoners. The jail prisoners are awaiting trial.

"There are six others in the same tier with Noble, and they are near enough for conversation, but he won't talk with them. Through the guards, the others swap magazines and other reading matter, but he won't have anything to do with them.

"I'd say, though, that he acts perfectly normal. He's only a boy in mighty strange surroundings. Last evening his brothers called on him and they were in and out so much that I'll have to make a rule limiting their visits.

APPETITE IS GOOD

"Eat well? Sure he does. He's got a good appetite and seems to like what we give him. And he certainly likes to read. His lawyer is coming over today for a long talk."

The visitors all see the boy in his cell, which is about five feet wide, by nine feet long, but other arrangements can be made for these callers if they wish.

HAMMER CASE 'INSPIRED' BOY

By BERT FORD

Haverhill, March 3—Russell Noble, "model boy" and psychological enigma, had started to write "A Book" on the case of Mrs. Clara E. Ellis, wealthy young widow, who was clubbed with a hammer in her Summer st. mansion, when he was arrested for the crime.

He told attaches of Haverhill Public Library he thought it would make a great mystery story." He collected every scrap written in the newspapers about the sensational midnight hammer attack to which the police claim he later confessed and made copious notes in the library's reading room the day following the crime.

The high school Adonis discussed the crime with Miss Mary Davis and Miss Dorothy Woodman, library attendants, with the calm deliberation that has characterized his demeanor since his voluntary surrender of the victim's wrist watch led to his alleged confession.

TALKED WITH NURSE

Other witnesses have been rounded up by the State police to testify that Noble discussed the assault with them before it had been made public by the authorities.

The boy told Miss Davis and Miss Woodman that he talked about the case with a nurse at Benson Hospital Thursday morning when he delivered newspapers as usual not only to the hospital, but to the home of Mrs. Ellis.

That was the day the young society matron was found unconscious and bleeding on her bed. The boy is said to have referred to the case as a "murder."

Haverhill Public Library is on Summer st, within a block of Mrs. Ellis' mansion and Benson Hospital where she lies between life and death.

WANTED TO DISCUSS CASE

"Russell Noble came in here daily to study before and after he delivered his newspapers in the afternoon. He was unusually studious, the last boy in the world one would ever suspect would become implicated in anything of this sort.

"Friday afternoon, after school, he came into the reading room and asked Dorothy Woodman in charge of the outer desk and me why we looked so glum.

"We told him we had been discussing something which we felt wouldn't be proper to discuss before a boy of his age and character.

"He left us and stepped into the reading room and when I returned to my desk he came over and said he knew what we had been discussing. He continued to talk about the affair. He said he thought it was terrible and asked me what they should do to a man who would do such a thing.

"I told him I didn't know and said I didn't like even to discuss such a case. He seemed so eager to dwell on it that I finally asked him to leave my desk and not bother me further about it.

SAID HE'D WRITE A BOOK

"He returned to his studies at one of the tables. He told me during the conversation that he discussed the case the morning before (Thursday) with someone at Benson Hospital, where he delivered newspapers.

"I don't recall all he said now or whether he mentioned that he delivered newspapers to Mrs. Ellis' home and knew her. His first talk was between 2:30 and 3:30.

"He went out at his usual time to deliver his afternoon papers on Friday, and when he returned he had all the papers in a bundle under his arm.

"He told me he had been thinking over the case and, decided that it would make a great mystery story, and he had decided to write a book about it.

HAD MANY NOTES

"He returned to one of the long tables and spent a long time taking notes from the various newspapers. He did not come in Saturday, and I recall that he was not in Wednesday at all."

When Noble was placed under arrest after his alleged confession at 1:20 Saturday morning the police found the numerous notes he had made about the case at the library in his pocket.

He had also the first chapter of his "book" in the form of a thesis in a schoolboy scrawl. These notes and the unfinished manuscript are now among the prosecution's prized exhibits.

U. S. Rejects Bequest of $5000 Made at Girl's Expense

That is the treasury's fix, however, because no law permits the government to refuse gifts. S. A. Long of Shinnston, W. Va., willed $5000 to the government while his granddaughter only got $1000.

Secretary Mellon thought the heir "should be better provided for, so Congress gave him "special relief" and today sent the President a bill authorizing Mellon to give the money back.

Lynching Is Laid to Wish for Spectacle

New York, March 3 (AP)—A survey attributing the Negro lynching in Maryville, Mo., to a desire for a "gruesome spectacle," has been made public by the Federal Council of Churches. Charged with fatally attacking a school teacher, Raymond Gunn was spirited out of jail, lashed to the roof of the school in which she taught, and burned to death. The report reads:

"But Maryville did not want an execution. It wanted a gruesome spectacle. Well, it got the spectacle and made its name a stench in the nostrils of the civilized world."

far as he is concerned good times are not merely "coming back," they have come.

He is building 200 Auburn cars a day, is behind in his orders, and expects to build an airplane to sell for $1500 and a good one. Meanwhile he sells a plane for several passengers at about $30,000.

He was interested to hear that W. R. Hearst had gone flying in one of his planes over the mountain ranges on the Hearst ranch Sunday.

The idea should be carried out, and boys in the new naval school should be trained primarily as fliers and submarine operators.

After the next war no one will bother with fighting water ships, unless they can travel around the world out of sight.

Real soldiers will all be soldiers of the air.

Soup Magnate's Estate Valued at $200,000,000

Camden, N. J., March 3 (AP)—New Jersey and Federal appraisers have valued the late Dr. John T. Dorrance's estate at more than $200,000,000, instead of the $150,000,000, the first estimate.

C. A. L. Lee, New Jersey State inheritance tax agent, at a meeting of the Camden County Republican committee, tonight said New Jersey alone would get $30,000,000 in inheritance tax from the estate, and that the federal inheritance tax would amount to an additional $7,500,000.

Old Howard Girl to Rest in Granary Burying Ground

NEXT TO LAST OF FINE COLONIAL FAMILY

First Interment Among Immortals in Hallowed Spot for Nearly 20 Years

For years, Mrs. Isabella ("Belle") Perry was head usher and a ticket seller at the Old Howard Theater, but tomorrow she will be buried beside patriots and notables of old Boston in Granary Burying Ground.

It will be the first interment in the famous cemetery in nearly 20 years, according to records of the cemetery division of the park department, and for the first time in that period, John F. Flynn, grave digger at Granary, will carry out the assignment for which he was appointed in 1902.

Mrs. Perry, descendant of an old Revolutionary Period family, is next to the last of her line, according to a friend, John P. Scannell of 33 Woodbury st., Arlington, her son, Otis Perry of Marblehead, surviving.

FRIEND OF MANY STARS

She died Sunday at City Hospital after a short illness at the age of 52. According to Fred Doherty of the Old Howard Theatre, Mrs. Perry had always been devoted to the theatre and was a close acquaintance of many former and present stars.

Before coming to the Howard Theatre, she was attached to the old Castle Square Theatre when John Craig was manager of that famous playhouse.

BORN IN BOSTON.

She was born in Boston, was the daughter of William Andrews, who was an undertaker in Howard st., and was the wife of Otis Perry, for whom the son is named. According to the death certificate at City Hall, she lived at 25 Ridgeway lane, while the address given at the Old Howard is 25 Temple st., both in the West End.

An Episcopal service was held for Mrs. Perry today, however, in the Temple st. address. Tomorrow she will be laid to rest in the famous burying ground covering less than an acre in Tremont st., and where are buried such famous men as John Hancock, James Otis, Paul Revere and the victims of the Boston massacre.

Washington, March 3 (INS)—Congress today completed the emancipation of women in naturalization matters when both Senate and house adopted a conference report on the cable bill which permits a woman married to an ineligible alien to retain her American citizenship.

VICTIM OF HAMMER ATTACK

Specialists fought today at the Benson Hospital, Haverhill, to save the life of Mrs. Clara E. Ellis, society hammer attack victim, who was slowly nearing death. This new picture of Mrs. Ellis was taken just a short time before the hammer attack.

SURROUNDED BY MYSTERY

Why the mystery? Why the Haverhill chatter concerning the night activities of young Russell Noble? What has the boy withheld? Is the alleged confession on the up and up? Why did Noble pick out Mrs. Clara Ellis as the victim of a robbery scheme? Last Christmas she sent Russell a gift. Why did the prisoner want a few dollars when it is reported that he had a bank account? There are many questions that annoy those following the case. Why the mystery?

FAITHFUL SWEETHEART

Charlotte Green, sweetheart of the Haverhill high school hammer attacker, will stick by him, she says. She was stunned on learning that young Noble had confessed entering Mrs. Ellis' home and beating her to the point of death with a hammer, but she still has faith in the youth.

Philadelphia, March 3 (INS)—With more than a score of persons injured, one seriously, police today investigated a mysterious explosion that partially wrecked three apartment houses in West Philadelphia and drove 100 frightened residents to the streets.

Police centered on the theory that the explosion was caused by a bomb in the rear of 3807-09 Chestnut st.

AUTO SOUGHT IN GORDON DEATH

New York, March 3 (AP)—The search for the slayer of Vivian Gordon, blackmailer and vice inquiry witness, centered today on a small coupe bearing the license number 8819.

General notice was broadcast by police that the coupe was wanted in connection with the murder. Inspector Henry Bruckman and District Attorney Charles B. McLaughlin of the Bronx refused to divulge the information they have about the coupe. Bruckman issued the broadcast with the warning that the car, when found, was not to be disturbed.

The license in question was issued to Harold Doman, who lived in an apartment hotel on the upper West Side. According to the hotel clerk, Doman lived there two weeks last year. The clerk said Doman had many callers, all of them men.

The theory the woman was slain because she was operating an extortion ring was tentatively accepted today by Police Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney.

Miss Gordon, he said, was an "expert racketeer," who supplied pretty women for gay parties with instructions to determine the social position and financial rating of their escorts for purposes of extortion. The names of about 40 men were listed in her diaries, he said.

A third witness was Anna F Smith, former confidential clerk and supervisor of the office force.

The investigation by Inspector Mitchell and Assistant Attorney General Sawyer disclosed, they said, that Adolph F. Benesch of New York was one of the founders of the company and that Austin M. Pinkham, Boston attorney, was counsel for Benesch and Freeman L. Davidson of Boston in organizing it.

Other disclosures were that Clifton K. Wells, well-known Baltimore attorney, was formerly president, and that Francis E. Shaw, Brockton banker, and Levi Meader of Gonic, N. H., were formerly executives.

The investigators said they found listed in the directory of executives John M. Robinson, millionaire banker of St. John, N. B.; James E. Simpson, Methuen banker and former treasurer of the company; Frederick G. Timperley of Boston, retail sales manager, and R. K. Hyde, well known Boston auditor.

HAMMER CASE INTRIGUED BOY

over night found it too difficult to effect an entrance and passed to No. 30, where Mrs. Ellis lives.

It appears that the secret lies with the young society matron who hovers between life and death at Benson Hospital.

DEFENSE UNSETTLED

Did she, in the few horrifying seconds that preceded the rain of hammer blows on her head, catch sight of the features of her assailant? Did she recognise her newsboy, and if so, will the fright and shock and injury efface her memory, if she recovers?

These are big questions just now not only to the defense but to the prosecution. If Mrs. Ellis survives and is mentally able to identify her assailant, danger of attack of the confession by the defense would be offset.

If she should die without regaining consciousness the strategical position of the defense would be strengthened. In the event of her death the charges against Noble of breaking and entering and murderous assault will be changed to first degree murder.

CONDITION GRAVE

That would mean that the boy, if bailed meanwhile on the $51,000 sureties demanded by the court, would have to be returned to a cell and held without bail pending grand jury action and trial.

Because of the uncertainty of Mrs. Ellis' condition, Noble's counsel and relatives have decided to mark time a few more days before pushing their quest for bail.

Mrs. Ellis' condition was so critical yesterday that death was feared at any hour.

Dr. E. Philip Laskey explained that removal of the broken skull pieces increased her temperature and that the transfusion of blood given by her brother, O. Kimball Clement, also had a reactionary effect.

STILL IN COMA

Physicians at the hospital fear blood-poisoning in the event that her head wounds, caused by a rusty and oily hammer, become seriously infected. She lay in bed six hours before being discovered, a period that increased the danger of infection.

Mrs. Ellis is taking much liquid nourishment and retaining it, Dr. Laskey added. He said she has been fed much ice cream.

In spite of his confession and the belated disclosure that he had attempted to break into another mansion that night, public sentiment is overwhelmingly in favor of young Noble. The widespread sympathy expressed for the blonde honor student makes his case unique.

Noble bears so close a resemblance to Rudy Vallee in general characteristics, although really handsomer, that many of his classmates call him "Rudy."

The "model boy's" unexpected arrest when he reported finding a wrist watch in the street has caused many to rally to his assistance. His pastor, Rev. George A. Cary, of First Church of Christ (Congregationalist), in Bradford, has been one of the lad's chief consolers.

Talk of launching a defense fund has not yet crystallized into action, but it is expected to very soon. There are thousands who would contribute varying sums. School chums are anxious to "chip in."

GANG MACHINE GUNS KILL ONE

Chicago, March 3 (AP)—Five machine gunners shot and killed one man and wounded another early today, but failed to explode a huge bomb which they tossed, with one of their victims, into the basement of a gambling establishment conducted by James Hackett in suburban Blue Island.

Boys' Taunts Cost Plaistow, N. H., $3600

Haverhill, March 3—Because the boys of his native town of Plaistow, N. H., which adjoins this city, plagued him and "got his goat," Horace M. Hills, 73, brother of Mrs. George W. Dobbins, wife of a Haverhill shoe manufacturer, made a codicil to his will just filed at Exeter, N. H., revoking various public bequests to Plaistow amounting to $3600.

Had his original will not been changed, the Plaistow library, the fire company and the town itself would have shared in the $3600. Part of the money he planned to leave to the town was to be spent in spraying trees to kill the moth pest.

N. H. Income Tax Deduction Limited

Concord, N. H., March 3 (AP)—The State Supreme Court ruled today that deductions from personal income tax of more than $1200 for a single man and $2000 for a married man for necessary living expenses would be unconstitutional. The ruling was in response to a request from the House, which has before it a measure proposing an income tax with deductions of $1500 and $3000 respectively for living expenses.

Wine and Beer Bill Offered in R. I.

Providence, March 3 (AP)—Establishment of a compensary system similar to Canadian provincial plans, under which the state would manufacture and sell 15 per cent wine and 6 per cent beer, is proposed in a bill introduced today by Representative Hazard, Narragansett, a Republican.

Payment of a $2 annual fee would entitle a resident to a permit for one quart of wine and six pints of malt liquors a day. The liquor would be sold at 100 stores, one in each assembly district, but not to be consumed on the premises.

Officers Now Smoke on the Los Angeles

Washington, March 3 (INS)—Officers of the navy's dirigible Los Angeles were allowed to smoke aboard for the first time during the recent manoeuvers off Panama, it was learned today.

A tiny, asbestos-lined smoking room was placed forward in the cabin while smoking regulations were strict the officers were able at intervals to partly satisfy the pangs of the smoker.

WOMAN NAMED IN TRIAL NOW A MOTHER

Waitress Brands the Story of Damaging Evidence Found After Party as False

Salem, March 3—Mrs. Katherine Perkins, the young Lynn woman whom Mrs. Gertrude Gross accuses of revelling lightly clad with her husband, Solomon Gross, at a party at Sunnyside Inn, Ipswich, in November, 1929, gave birth to a child in December of that year, according to medical testimony introduced today in Mrs. Gross' divorce suit.

Dr. Charles Gregory, Lynn physician, a defense witness, told the court that he had attended Mrs. Perkins and that she was confined Dec. 30, 1929. In addition, Dr. Gregory, after testifying that he was well acquainted with Mrs. Perkins, said that her hair was a dark reddish brown.

TELL OF MANY OFFERS

Witnesses for the prosecution had described the girl who, wearing only a brassiere, dined with Mrs. Gross and his companions at the party as a light blonde.

Two more defense witnesses told of offers of money from Mrs. Gross and her late father, Harry Goodman, for testimony which would incriminate Gross.

Mrs. Pauline Richards, a waitress at Sunnyside Inn, testified that Mrs. Gross came to see her, and offered to "pay her well" to identify a picture of Mrs. Perkins as a guest at the party. She also branded as false the testimony of Miss Florence MacEachern, another waitress, that damaging evidence had been found the morning following the party in the cottage occupied by Gross and his friends.

"Miss MacEachern never cleaned the cottage alone, and I or one of the other girls would have noticed the conditions she described if what she says were true," Mrs. Richards said.

William Sullivan, Lynn shoe manufacturer, who followed Mrs. Richards on the stand, testified he had been offered $500 by Goodman, Mrs. Gross' father, to sign a blank affidavit, to be filled in at Goodman's discretion. Sullivan was named by witnesses as another guest at the party.

TWO WOMEN ON PAYROLL

"Goodman told me that he had two women on his payroll who could give him enough evidence to send Gorss to jail, but that he would use me to appear in the case, too," Sullivan said. "I refused Goodman's offer, and was approached by him again on two occasions."

Mrs. Rose Gross, mother of the defendant, testified that he attempts at reconciling the estranged pair had elicited from Mrs. Gertrude Gross a statement that she intended divorcing Gross to marry a wealthier man selected by her father. The elder Mrs. Gross became ill on the stand and was excused from further testimony.

Wild Driver Given 18-Month Sentence

Palmer, March 3 (AP)—Lawrence Chatfell of Cambridge, driver of a truck, and his companion, James Keegan of Boston, were sentenced to jail in district court here today as the aftermath of a wild chase through this town, in which State Patrolman Joseph Mellen was crowded off the highway and injured.

Chatfell will serve a year and a half on charges of driving so as to endanger life. Keegan will serve six months for unlawful use of a motor vehicle.

Mellen suffered a double fracture of a leg, besides other injuries when he was forced to leap from his motorcycle while traveling 60 miles an hour.

Man Adrift 8 Days in Boat Is Rescued

New York, March 3 (AP)—The story of the operator of a disabled motorboat who drifted eight days off the Florida coast, virtually without food or water, was related today in a radio message from the Norwegian freighter Harboe Jensen, which identified the man as George O. Wilson of Lake Worth, Fla.

Marshal Foch's Memoirs

AMERICANS' NOVEMBER DRIVE FOR BUZANCY SUCCEEDS

In yesterday's Installment Marshal Foch told how he was advised by Clemenceau to ask Wilson to recall Pershing because of the general's obstinacy. Today he tells of Pershing's brilliant success in the November offensive of the American army.

By MARSHAL FERDINAND FOCH

Commander-in-Chief of the Allied Armies During the Closing Phases of the World War.

Translated from the French by Col. T. Bentley Mott

It was now important to pass from theory to action. For that reason Gen. Pershing was urged to hasten the launching of his offensive west of the Meuse.

"It is of the highest importance," the Allied commander-in-chief wrote him on October 27, "that the American First Army be ready to begin operations on the date decided upon, viz.: November 1, and that it be able to continue them until important and certain results have been attained."

It therefore prescribed that the attacks to be undertaken by the American First Army on November 1 should be pushed forward and continued without any pause until this army was in possession of Boult-aux-Bois, Buzancy and further to the east, and had assured the occupation of the region as a first result to be obtained.

These attacks were facilitated by successive actions which the French Fourth Army had been developing since October 13th which drew upon itself a considerable part of the German troops in the Argonne, thus relieving the pressure on the American Army.

It was under these conditions that the American offensive was carried out on November 1st. From the beginning it achieved brilliant success, capturing the first day the enemy positions as far as the Buzancy-Stenay road, while on the left, the French Fourth Army extended its foothold east of the Aisne.

Orders were now given to develop without delay the advantages obtained, by continuing the combined Franco-American operations in the direction of Sedan and Mezieres.

Severly shaken, the enemy, between the Aisne and the Muse, was not long in beginning a retreat. On November 2nd, Croix-aux-Bois, Buzancy, Villers-devant-Dun and Doulcon fell into our hands. On the 3rd, the entire northern part of the Argonne was cleared, the heights of Beival were occupied and our troops lined the left bank of the Meuse as far as Dun.

On the 4th, the Franco-American advance was continued beyond Stenay and Le Chesne, penetrating into the wooded region south of Beaumont and progressing along the Meuse almost to Stenay.

I warmly congratulated General Pershing on the very important results obtained, "thanks to the ability shown by commanders and the energy and bravery of the troops."

I urged him to continue his operations "in the direction of the Meuse around Buzellies and upstream from there," and to extend them as much as possible on the right bank of that river.

But now, what was happening east of the Meuse?

Mention has already been made of the action of the French XVII Corps, reinforced by two American divisions (33rd and 29th), in prolonging during October 8th-10th, along the right bank of the Meuse the offensive being conducted on the left bank by the main body of the American Army, and how, after hard fighting, this force had reached the line Sivry-sur-Meuse-Beaumont.

Strike at Weak Spot

Plans Prepared for an Attack Along the Moselle

Continuing these operations on the ensuing days it had met with constantly increasing resistance from the enemy.

The enemy seemed firmly resolved to hold the right bank of the Meuse at all costs, since this was his sole chance of covering and assuring the retreat of his beaten armies on his right wing and center.

In order to frustrate this scheme by taking the Meuse defenses in reverse, the Allied High Command decided that the time had come to make an attack along both banks of the Moselle in the general direction of Longwy-Luxemburg on one hand, and of the Sarre on the other.

On October 20, the following instructions were given General Petain:

"The operations now under way are intended to throw the enemy back on the Meuse at Stenay and below that place. To overcome his resistance on this river by taking it in reverse, attacks should be prepared west and east of the Moselle, moving in the general direction of Longway-Luxembourg, on one side, and of the Sarre on the other.

"The chance of prompt success for these attacks will be in proportion to the promptness with which they are made, since the enemy has at present in line 127 divisions west of the Meuse and only 32 divisions east of that river.

"Their chances are also increased by the fact that the enemy will soon be deprived of his principal transversal railway line from Mezieres to Sedan.

"It would also be useful to examine in what way the American forces might best participate in these operations, as soon as they are rendered in part available by the advance hing made on the left bank of the Meuse, and they can be oriented in a new direction."

This decision to attack in the Moselle region seemed all the more justified in view of the fact that survey recently made by the Intelligence Branch of French General Headquarters had shown the lack of equilibrium existing between the German effectives on the two sides of the Ardennes.

On October 21 the Commander-in-Chief of the French Armies sent me his proposals covering the general organization of the projected attacks in Lorraine. Though judiciously conceived, this study nevertheless presented the drawback of interdicting a sufficiently rapid ex a delay.

Especially was the action proposed west of the Moselle such as to require for various reasons adelay.

American Aid

Pershing Asked to Help Out With Six Reserve Divisions

East of the Moselle conditions seemed better, and it was for this reason that I decided to utilize in that quarter first, and without delay, such forces as were immediately available.

I therefore gave up for the moment the action against Luxembourg, and restricted the scope of the original plan, but I still counted upon obtaining, even with relatively reduced resources, important results by capturing at small cost the entire depth of the defensive zone organized during four years, through a wide exploitation of our attacks; and from the moral standpoint, by making our first entry upon territory considered by the enemy as part of his own country and which we therefore ought to conquer."

General Petain was asked to prepare an attack which would move in the general direction of Saint-Avold-Sarrebruck. On Oct. 25 he reported that this attack could be made around November 15.

The execution was to be entrusted to two armies—the Eighth (General Gerard), already in position, and the Tenth (General Mangin).

Twenty divisions (of which four or five were American), ten or 12 regiments of field artillery, 180 to 200 heavy batteries, three regiments of light tanks and two groups of medium-sized tanks, one corps of cavalry and the air division, were to constitute the attacking forces.

In addition, the commander-in-chief of the French Armies asked that "a certain number of American divisions" be placed at his disposal. Even under the most favorable circumstances he could not count upon the co-operation of more than six or eight American divisions, over and above the forces to be employed in covering Metz. This was to be entrusted to the American Second Army.

Meanwhile, the Allied forces were being concentrated in Lorraine, and on November 6, General Mangin and his staff arrived on the scene of preparations.

Efforts to provide General Petain with the greatest possible number of American units sent on actively. Some were obtained by reducing the length of the American First Army's front as soon as it arrived on the Meuse.

I also wrote General Pershing asking the co-operation of six of his reserve divisions, and I wrote him again a few days later to reassure him:

"The general commanding the French Tenth Army who will have these divisions under his orders, will take measures to see that they operate as much as possible on his left and, on my side, I will give orders to have them promptly replaced under American command. It is a case before everything else, of moving quickly. That is why I again insist with you."

I also asked General J. Haller, Commander-in-Chief of the Polish Army, to authorize the participation in the approaching offensive of the Polish First Division which after serving on the front in a quiet sector, was now capable of taking an active part in the battle.

WHAT ARE YOU PAYING FOR?

You can pay almost any price for meat today—and what you pay doesn't really matter. It is what you pay for that counts.

Take steak for example. Compare not only the price, but the steaks themselves. A&P steak, carefully cut from high-grade heavy beef, trimmed free of excess fat and bone, actually gives you more food and better food than steaks which sell for less money, but which include fat, bone and other waste.

At A&P Markets you pay no more than you pay elsewhere—but most of the time you actually get more for your money—better meat and less waste.

What can be done with Life Insurance

(7) Providing for Aged Parents

THE older we grow the more we realize what most parents sacrifice in their earlier years to give advantages to their children: and that the sacrifice is often made at the cost of the parents' own financial future.

So in turn, it devolves upon the child, when grown, to see that his parents are supplied with the requisites of comfort and happiness in their old age.

The arrangement of an income for parents during their declining years is a vital item in the LIFE INSURANCE plan. This can be done by the annuity form of contract, through which a regular income is assured them so long as they may live.

MILLION STAKE IN EYE TEST

Chicago, March 3 (INS)—A family of seven—comprised of two blue-eyed parents, two blue-eyed children and three brown-eyed children—was to be exhibited for scientific reasons today in the court of Judge Michael Feinberg.

Attorneys for George Adair Greene Longley, fighting to break the $1,000,000 will of the late Albert W. Longley, a hat manufacturer, contend this family proves that, although George Longley is brown-eyed, he may still be the son of blue-eyed Albert Longley and a woman with blue eyes.

The brown-eyed Longley claims to be the son of the late manufacturer and his first wife, Mrs. Alice Adair Longley. He is asking for half of the Longley estate instead of the $700 annuity provided in the will.

"Blue-eyed parents can have brown-eyed children," Prof. Horatio Hackett Newman of the University of Chicago testified on the complainant's behalf.

Wall St. Sees Big Gas and Power Combine

New York, March 3 (AP)—Wall Street speculated today upon the possibility of another gigantic power merger as the result of the announcement by United Corporation, so-called Morgan-Bonbright company, of its acquisition of a dominant interest in the Niagara Hudson Power Corporation.

In financial circles the expansion of Utilities stock interest in the Niagara Hudson Corporation, dominant up-state New York utility, was viewed as foreshadowing the ultimate merger of the Niagara Hudson Corporation and the Consolidated Gas Company of New York city.

NYE BOARD HITS DAVIS EXPENSES

Washington, March 3 (AP)—The Senate campaign funds committee today condemned as excessive the expenditures of the Davis-Brown ticket in last year's Pennsylvania Republican primary but upheld the integrity of Senator Davis.

The report was presented by Chairman Nye without comment. Davis immediately issued a statement saying the committee's assertion it had found nothing reflecting upon his honor "nails one lie."

He went on to say he had been charged with having received a $10,000 campaign contribution and not reporting it. This charge was investigated by the committee, he said, and found false.

The committee report laid emphasis on the expenditures of $622,238 by the Davis ticket on with the former Labor Secretary was paired with Francis Shunk Brown, unsuccessful candidate for governor.

HEFLIN'S FINAL HYMN OF HATE

Washington, March 3 (INS)—To a chamber filled with nodding and sleepy senators, Senator Tom Heflin (D), of Alabama, sang his swansong of opposition to "the Catholics" and "the Al Smiths" and "the Raskobs" in the early hours of this morning. Heflin goes out of the Senate tomorrow, having been defeated last November.

The Alabaman's language became so violent at times that it invoked angry responses from other Southern Democrats, and caused Vice-President Curtis to almost wreck his gavel trying to maintain order.

In the midst of the row, Senator George H. Moses, (R) of New Hampshire obtained recognition for a moment and said:

"'Behold, how sweet and pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.'"

The oleomargarine bill was up at the time. Loud laughter greeted this sally and then the irate Southerner went at it again.

CHAPTER ONE

Rumors now current that Popeye was born at the age of 40 and is steadily growing younger are totally unfounded. The horseshoe-flated sailor was only two or three years old at birth, a normal infant in every way. He was always willing to take his pipe out of his mouth for the morning bottle of malted hardtack.

Impressed by early home training, as Number 183764, Popeye refrained from getting into serious fights until he was almost four and the keeper tried his patience once too often. He was a prize baby in many shows and always took great pride in his Bertillon measurements.

Unfortunately, Popeye was born an orphan. Today he often says:

"Blow me down, I never had no ma or pa. Tha's why I'm a orphink."

One of the hard-hitting mariner's chief charms is his ability to reason things out.

The accompanying unretouched picture shows the gifted infant, Popeye himself, at the age of two weeks. Earlier pictures do not do him justice, because in all of them particularly the one taken many years before and captioned, "Spinach," the photographer's head-clamp is plainly visible, and also his brother, Jon, who has often been mistaken for Popeye.

Notice the article Popeye has clamped in his manly teeth. At first glance it appears to be a bottle, but in reality it is a hickory pipe which has suffered a stoppage in the stem. Popeye has refused to be daunted by the molar which has shaken loose and clogged his "briar." He is endeavoring to blow it on through into the bowl, with a result which is plainly evident.

Tomorrow: The story of Popeye's boyhood. Every day follow "Thimble Theater, starring Popeye," which appears daily in the Boston Evening American.

Girls Saved by Tea as Bolt Hits Plant

Melbourne, Australia, March 3 (AP)—At the Nobel explosive works at Deer park today, during a storm, an acid tank in the mixing room was struck by lightning and exploded. Windows were shattered for miles around but there was no loss of life since the girls working there had left the room a few minutes previously for the afternoon tea interval.

CHILDREN SHOULD HAVE WHOLESOME DESSERTS DAILY

Puddings and Custards Essential for Maintaining Correct Weight

Puddings made of rice, tapioca or cornstarch; custards and ice cream are appropriate desserts for the development of the growing child who is underweight. Such a dessert not only supplements the other food in the meal but causes the child to leave the table satisfied.

The part sugar plays in making these desserts appealing should be considered in relation to other foods. Those which are carriers of vitamins, minerals and roughage can be made as inviting as desserts by the use of sugar as a flavor. Cabbage, onions, cauliflower, turnips, tomatoes, peas and other vegetables —canned or fresh—are much improved in appetizing qualities when seasoned with a dash of sugar to a pinch of salt. Likewise sugar is ideal on fruits and cereals.

Doctors and dietitians approve this use of sugar. For, when the flavor of a food is inviting to the taste, the flow of gastric juices is increased, thus aiding digestion. Good food promotes good health. The Sugar Institute.

Recommended for tonight's best radio bets are first, Paul Whiteman and orch. o'er WBZA at 8 . . . The jazz and allmony king can usually count on our laudatory vote . . . And tonight is no exception, especially since the leader will offer Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Song of India" in modern dance rhythm. Paul was the first to present this number in modern fashion . . . Whiteman's theme song, "Rhapsody in Blue" by Gershwin will be played in its entirety over WNAC at 8:30 by Howard Barlow and his symphony orchestra . . . Quite a detraction for the customary Barlow program . . . In fact this marks the first time a modern, radical composition will be offered by this group . . . Perhaps we should not say radical, for radical things usually don't live long . . . And from all appearances "Rhapsody in Blue" is scheduled to go on like the well known Tennyson brook.

Radio Personalities

SIR HUBERT WILKINS is making plans to broadcast to a nation-wide network this summer from the polar regions . . . BORRAH MINNEVITCH and his harmonica band may soon be a CBS feature . . . And NBC has signed RUTH CHATTERTON. It is said . . . A third whisper is that RUDY VALLEE is writing an article on his grapefruit experience here . . . A new chain has sprung up on the Pacific Coast. It is called the United Broadcasting Company and consists of nine stations . . . Speaking of chains, CBS has a news subsidiary, the Dixie chain of 11 stations, with WBT, Charlotte, N. C., the key-point . . . FLORENCE RICHARDSON, NBC orchestra leader, possesses a $10,000 violin, gift of a stranger who liked her playing . . . One of the few radio artists who is contracted for one program exclusively is JESSICA DRAGONETTE . . . Rugs two inches thick are being installed in all CBS studios. This is a means of censuring the sound of the leather heels . . . JIMMY WALKER, mayor of N. Y., like CHARLIE CHAPLIN, declined an NBC offer for a series of broadcasts, although the remuneration was luscious . . . WMCA will broadcast the six-day bike races. For announcer we suggest NORMAN PIERCE, holder of the world's record for continuous radio talking . . . Ripley this one: NBC has on its staff a Japanese announcer. He is TED JEWETT, who was born in Yokohama and lived there until he was six years old.—M. G. M.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

HOWEVER little or much Adelaide Chatfield Whitman's "Heritage" may contribute to the season's dilapidated drama, the performance at the Copley last evening was not without honest merit. Its important concession to an interested audience was the opportunity afforded Earle Larimore and Mark Kent to polish up their talents and set them off in spirited fashion. He was the old story of the faithful butler, his friendly master and a household made up of many undesirables.

* * *

ONLY UPON rare occasions in the theater have you met an old family servant like Trent; and only upon occasions have you been privileged to see one played so smartly — at all times, impressively. Mr. Kent, whose Trent will go into the Copley's record as perhaps the year's highest artistic achievement, was not the guest star of the evening; he was just the plodding actor who has played many roles in many weeks. And he proved himself a match for the more distinguished Larimore at every turn of the play. The gentle author of "Heritage" owes each of these two stalwarts a womanly blessing for what they brought out of her play.

* * *

HAVING DISPOSED of the master and his man, it may be mentioned that "Heritage" principally concerned New England tradition as applied to the Ripley family, the head of which, it appeared, had slumped in two generations from governor of the state to country club loper. There was a third generation growing up, and the faithful Trent, staggering down through the years, was to save the last Ripley, but not without considerable wear and tear upon his aging mind and aching, unsteady legs.

* * *

BORROWED from the Theater Guild for the week, Mr. Larimore played the dual role of a Ripley who drank himself to suicide and that of the son who finally replaced the family on steady feet. He set about the job with deep earnestness—with conviction.

* * *

A FULL ASSORTMENT of dramatic element's was crowded into the three acts of "Heritage." There was comedy of excellent flavor; melodrama that provided its own suspense, and enough shocks to make you wonder if at any moment a life-size ghost might not leap into view. All of which aroused curiosity and interest.

He Knows His Cocktails

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS AND EDWARD EVERETT HORTON

"Reaching for the Moon" is proving a great drawing card at the State this week. Sharing the starring honors with Douglas Fairbanks is Bebe Daniels. It is one of Doug's best films.

SNAPPY SHOW AT HOWARD

At the Old Howard another Mutual burlesque show, known as the "Girls in Blue," provides the brighter kind of burlesque. Clyde Bates and Hap Freyer keep things going at a merry pace and for originality are not exceeded on the entire circuit. Tanzer, the dancer, was accorded a rousing welcome and her artistic efforts won instant favor. Ruth Bradley has a lot of personality and Buddy Nichols pleased in good measure. Halene Ardell is another favorite.

In addition to the burlesque the Howard cans on the front with a sterling stage bill. Four Aces and a Queen offer a comedy bar act and Baker, Dove and Allen have a juggling novelty. Jaffie and Dode, singers and dancers, scored.

Metropolitan

Four "Giant shows" is the billing at the Metropolitan for March. Next Thursday "Honor Among Lovers" will be on screen; on the stage will be "Oh Lester," with Lester Allen. On March 12 will be "Unfaithful" with Ruth Chatterton, and on the stage "Down Went McGinty." On March 19 on the screen will be "June Moon," and on the stage Horace Heidt and his Californians. On March 26 will be seen "Man of the World" with William Powell, and on the stage will be "Carnival of Youth."

NEW NUMBERS FOR DANCER

Mary Wigman, the German dancer, has changed her program for her engagement at Symphony Hall next Saturday evening. Four new numbers comprise these changes, which are as follows: Zeremonielle Gestalt (Ceremonial Figure); Traumgestalt (Dream Image); Tanz des Leides (Dance of Sorrow); Allegro. Also, from a Spanish suite of songs and rhythms, Tanz des Leides is the number recently given by Miss Wigman in one of her New York programs in honor of the memory of her late friend and colleague, Anna Pavlowa.

Mary Wigman

Constance Bennett at Orpheum Friday

Constance Bennett is starred on the screen at Loew's Orpheum Friday in "The Easiest Way." Harry Holmes, the pessimistic and optimistic comedian, will top the new vaudeville bill. The Marcelius dancers will be seen in a scenic song and dance production; Leon and Dawn will offer a unique comedy act and others scheduled to appear are the radio favorites, Jerome and Ryan.

EXCERPTS:

By all means see "Trader Horn." Not other picture of its kind has touched its heights. It should entertain you richly; and it cannot but stir you deeply. It's a natural epic that will thrill your into breathlessness.—Harleigh Schultz, THE AMERICAN.

"Trader Horn" is far and away the best of all African adventure pictures. Its scenes are sheer black and white magic. It is an epic of the dark jungle.—Gordon Hillman, DAILY RECORD.

"Trader Horn" in its entirety of two hours is something not to be missed. It is genuinely exciting, often thrilling, and never dull. It is doubtful if a finer, more authentic series of animal pictures ever has been filmed.—Wm. E. Greenough, THE HERALD.

Director W. S. Van Dyke has done such a splendid piece of work in making the film that the average member of the audience is almost limp with excitement before the end of the picture is reached.—Marjorie Adams, THE GLOBE.

Fearsome spectacles, such as have never before been seen in the theatre, are displayed in "Trader Horn," and we can promise you that once you will grip the arms of your chair and give thanks you are in the Majestic instead of the jungle.—Helen Eager, THE TRAVELER.

If you are looking for thrills, frightfully realistic, yet horribly fascinating thrills, then "Trader Horn," now at the Majestic Theatre, is your dish.—Prunella Hall, THE POST.

"It is a film to please the eye as well as startle the imagination."—E. F. M., TRANSCRIPT.

BASEBALL STORY WILL BE HAROLD LLOYD'S NEXT

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, March 3—Harold Lloyd's days are pretty full what with his daily call on his young son at the hospital and getting ready to make a picture. He has just purchased an original baseball story from Al Boasberg with the very expressive title of "Call Me Flash." Al Boasberg is one of Hollywood's local funsters and he has put a good deal of comedy into this latest opus.

Speaking of the Lloyd baby, I talked with a friend of Mildred's and Harold's who had visited Harold, Jr. She says the baby instead of looking red and wrinkly, as you would expect a tiny baby, has a clear olive skin and light hair, and is an unusually pretty baby.

The doctor has promised if all goes well, that Mr. Lloyd, Jr., may go to his palatial estate in three weeks, and what a welcome he will get. A new nursery with all the trimmings has been arranged for him. What a spoiled youngster the little boy will be, with Mildred, Gloria and Marjorie Elizabeth adoring him, to say nothing of mamma and papa.

* * *

LOOKS AS IF First National appreciates Rose Hobart. She has been borrowed from Universal for the feminine lead in "We Three," following her work in a recent First National film. What happened to Loretta Young, you ask. Well, Loretta was needed for "Upper Underworld." Walter Huston's next picture, hence the change.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD COLLECTED AT RANDOM: WILLIAM and NAN HOWARD giving a party at their home in honor of the BUD DE SYLVAS who are going abroad. The KEO McCREYs getting ready to make the trip with the DESYLVAS. IRENE RICH, ROBERT MONTGOMERY and LEW CODY lunching at the Brown Derby in separate parties. JOE E. BROWN and his wife entertaining the JACK SHARKEYS and accompanying them to the fights. RUBEN MAMOULIAN getting a new long term contract. BESSIE LOVE and BILL HAWKS glimpsed at the opening of "Paris in Spring." ESTELLE TAYLOR visiting First National and commenting on the excellence of LESLIE FENTON'S work. COUNT DE SEGUROLA with the inevitable monocle in the Cocoanut Grove. CLAIRE WINDSOR, KAY JOHNSON and POLLY ANN YOUNG among the good-looking women there the same night. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

'TRADER HORN' MARKS STAR'S RETURN

HELEN HAYES

MISS HAYES comes to the Wilbur as the star of "Petticoat Influence."

BY ACCOMPANYING her husband to Africa for an adventure, Mrs. Harry Carey, who retired from the screen some years ago when she married the noted actor, found herself back in pictures. She plays the missionary woman in "Trader Horn," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, based on the famous book of adventure, filmed in a trek through the jungles of the Dark Continent, and which is now at the Majestic.

Mrs. Carey, or as she is professionally known, Olive Golden, decided to accompany her husband when he was chosen to play the title role in the picture. She used to be his leading lady in Western dramas, and, like her husband, is an ardent lover of hunting and out-of-door life.

When the troupe reached Africa, Director W. S. Van Dyke induced her to play the role of the missionary.

Miss Wambolt has written a song, "Throw Your Troubles Away," which is likely to be included in the music score of "Vincent Voodoos."

MISS THORNDIKE MISS SALTONSTALL MISS WELDELL

FUTURE BRIDE AMONG CANDIDATES FOR CAST

Miss Winifred Thorndike, Miss Betsy Saltonstall and Miss Barbara Wendell listened attentively to instructions given by Mr. Miles at the "try-out" for the Vincent Club Show, "Vincent Voodoos." Miss Saltonstall announced her engagement Sunday to August Belmont, of New York. She will be a June bride. (Staff photos.)

MISS ROGERS MISS WAMBOLT

GETTING IN STEP FOR A SPECIALTY NUMBER

Miss Dorothy Rogers and Miss Sally Wambolt trying out a few steps for a "specialty" number in the show for the benefit of the Vincent Memorial Hospital.

Plenty of Talent Available for Cast of 'Vincent Voodoos'

THE SOMERSET BALLROOM looked like a Hollywood lot with an all-star cast and Mr. Miles will have no trouble in picking his "walking" chorus from the many beautiful girls assembled for his choice. Mrs. Thomas Proctor arrived in a gorgeous mink wrap; she is always one of the "show girls." Mrs. LeBaron C. Colt is another young matron who always appears ready for a fashion parade; Miss Elizabeth Scaife was chic in tweed ensemble; Betsy Saltonstall, whose engagement has been just announced, was charming in brown; Miss Helen Moseley was unusually attractive in tweed-knit costume; dark brown crepe was becoming to Miss Harriet Morse, and other snappy tweeds were worn by Miss Eleanor Gibson and Mrs. John Flint. Mrs. Guilford Stewart wore a smart beaver, and Miss Alison Towle was debonair in tweeds.

"IT DOESN'T SEEM POSSIBLE that it has really begun," observed Miss Harriet Morse, president of the Vincent Club, to Mrs. William C. Cox, first vice-president and director of publicity, at the "try-out" yesterday for the new Vincent Club show, with the intriguing title, "Vincent Voodoos," which was held in the Princess Ballroom at the Hotel Somerset. This eagerly anticipated event gathered over a hundred of the talented and most attractive members, and they listened attentively to the reports, which were read by Mrs. John Flint, regarding the amount of advertising which has already been sold in the programs, nearly $12,000 to date, a bit more than last year.

MRS. WILLIAM S. FEBIGER was the recipient of an antique love-seat as first prize for her effort in this way; Miss Nancy Hallowell received a leather vanity case as a close second, Mrs. Thomas P. Beale won a beautiful flower vase as a still closer third and a fourth prize was awarded to Mrs. Robert B. Almy. These four members each sold over a thousand dollars' worth, or between 25 and 30 ads each.

A SPECIAL PRIZE OF $50 each was given to Mrs. Ira R. Kent and Mrs. Richard Baker by a local epicurean establishment for the best letter which will be used in the program as an advertisement, and the same company handed Mrs. Flint a check for $136 which covered $2 each for every letter received from a member.

Members Compose Songs for Vincent Club's Annual Show

AFTER THIS BRIEF INTERLUDE, the "show" went on and Mr. George M Miles and his assistant, Mr. George Erdman, who staged last year's effort so successfully, handed out the musical score and those who could sing, or wanted to, raised their voices lustily.

THE MUSIC, VERY BRIGHT and snappy, and with Ruby Newman and his incomparable orchestra attending to the rendering of it, that part of the program may be anticipated with keen pleasure. Pretty Miss Penny Read has composed a song, "Man of My Dreams," and hisfriend Sally Wambolt has also contributed another, "Throw Your Troubles Away," which will be tried out for possible acceptance.

MARGARET BENT AND Nancy Whitman were tip-tapping here, there and everywhere waiting for a chance to do their stunt and they no doubt will be one of the specialty numbers. Miss Bent is getting famous for her, parts in children's plays.

"YES—I am 39 years Old!"

SAYS IRENE RICH

"I DON'T mind confessing it a bit," says Irene Rich with her warm, irresistible smile. "I really am thirty-nine years old!

"A screen star never worries about birthdays, you see, as long as she doesn't look old. To hold her public—to face the cruel test of the close-up—she must keep the fresh loveliness of youth.

"That is why in Hollywood we guard complexion beauty above all else. We know it says 'youth' quicker than anything else. Any woman who wants to keep her charm right through the years should keep her skin always soft, smooth, youthfully aglow."

How does this lovely star guard complexion beauty? Just as so many other Hollywood actresses do—605 of the 613 important ones! "I use Lux Toilet Soap regularly," she says, "and have for years."

For every type of skin, Hollywood will tell you, this fragrant, delicately white soap is the perfect complexion care. Surely you will want to try it!

Photographed by Autrey, Hollywood 1930

24 PARALYZED BY JAKEY

Los Angeles, March 3 (AP)—Twenty-four ex-service men, victims of paralysis caused by drinking an adulterated ginger extract, were being treated today at the National Soldiers' Home at Sawtelle, a suburb, as county and federal officers investigated the source of supply.

Dr. Maurice Smith of the United States Public Health Service, said the extract contains 80 to 85 per cent alcohol. It is a violation of the prohibition laws to sell it as a beverage and a violation of the State and federal drug laws to mislabel the product as jamaica ginger. The extract which is causing the paralysis was found by the investigators to contain phenolester, an adulterant which supplants the ginger.

It tells how a solidly organized concern, dealing mainly in perishable foodstuffs, was able to come through a year of general depression, and earn dividends for its shareholders.

It shows that Swift & Company's profits come chiefly from savings and the elimination of waste.

It tells why a food monopoly by any packer or group of packers is impossible.

There are chapters on the Consent Decree and its modification; on Swift's service to the small retailer; on the incessant competition in the packing business; on Swift & Company's marvelous distributive system—and many other important subjects.

Gangsters Scheme in Story of Secret 6

What Has Gone Before

Louie Scorpio, called "Slaughterhouse," champion steer killer of the stockyards and winner of the revolver prize at the butchers' annual picnic, decided to join the bootleg racket run by Johnny Franks. His decision was clinched by the frameup appearance at Franks' cafe of "Peaches," a beauty of the underworld. The gang invades the territory of Joe Colimo, a rival racketeer, with a truckload of beer. Fight ensued, in which Colimo's brother is killed. Colimo puts Scorpio "on the spot," but fails to kill him. The latter returns to the steak house and shoots Franks to death. "The Secret Six" is organized to fight crime.

CHAPTER 10

Scorpio the Leader

SCORPIO RETURNED to the steak house, to receive the wildest welcome any man had ever been given in Centro.

Jubilant gangsters gathered about him as he alighted with Newton from the big car that had once been Johnny Franks'.

Peaches greeted him with smiles, as he made triumphal progress through the restaurant beyond.

The Cougar, delighted, informed the crowds that "Slaughterhouse won out! The jury did the square thing!"

And messengers slipped into the rear door, bearing mysterious packages that were to be turned into joy—and later headaches.

"I'm sorry they wouldn't let me out of prison to go to Johnny's funeral," he remarked to Mike, the Duck. Mike had handled the details of that ornate function.

"Was the flowers I sent all right?"

Scorpio Speaks

"They sure was swell, and the casket you paid for—with that plate—'To Johnny Franks from his dear old Pal Scorpio'—you know it made a lotta chumps cry."

Scorpio nodded, satisfied.

MISSING PAPERS NOT TAKEN BY HARVARD MAN

Data on Liquor Conditions in the Bay State Is Being Hunted in Vain

Mystery as to the whereabouts of certain detailed reports of the Wickersham Commission deepened today with a denial by Dean Roscoe Pound of the Harvard Law School that he has been carrying them around in his pocket.

A frantic search for the missing reports on prohibition conditions in Massachusetts and other wet areas has been going on at the commission's headquarters at Washington.

They must be submitted to the Senate before Wednesday noon, the final adjournment hour, but a search of every nook and cranny has failed to bring forth the missing papers.

The commission turned hopefully to Dean Pound. It seems that someone recalled seeing the Dean shove them in his pocket a week or more ago.

When questioned about them today the Dean replied that he hadn't been in Washington for two weeks. He was reminded that the deadline for submitting them to the Senate is tomorrow noon.

"I can't help that," he replied. "They're not in my pockets. I don't know where they are, and besides I've got some classes this morning and I haven't time to talk any more about it."

And so the search goes on.

ONE VETERAN A MINUTE AT LOAN BUREAU

30,000 More Blanks Printed by Boston American to Speed Up Work

The Boston Evening American bureau will be open daily from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., main floor, 5 Winthrop sq. At this bureau veterans will receive application blanks and instructions for filling them out and filing them with the Veterans' Bureau.

Additional hundreds of World War veterans continued to apply at the Veterans' Bureau in Washington st. and the branch bureau established by the Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., for loans on their bonuses.

Thirty thousand additional application blanks were printed by the Boston American in order that every ex-service man who desired might have one. Twenty thousand of the blanks printed by this newspaper were turned over to Lieut.-Col. William J. Bolster, national manager of the Boston Veterans' Bureau, as his supply from Washington had run out. Lieut. Bolster immediately got in touch with the company that printed the blanks for the Boston American and expressed his appreciation for the courtesy.

BLANKS USED UP

The original 30,000 blanks received by Col. Bolster from Washington were quickly exhausted by the ex-service men who rushed to the bureau in person and by mail. Additional supplies of several thousand blanks were then printed by the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars, which are aiding ex-service men in filing their applications. Large numbers were also sent to branch offices of the bureau especially to regular bureau stations at Worcester and Springfield, which are centers of population in different sections of the state.

At the Boston American bureau on the main floor of 5 Winthrop sq applications were being executed and filed at the rate of about one every minute. Thousands of questions were answered concerning details of the act of congress and the rights under various circumstances under the adjusted compensation law in general.

Note on What Is Not Very Important
(Quite an unusual occurrence, by the way)

Our moral codes are often changed.
Reorganized and rearranged;
Thus progress gives to every wice
A chance to be considered nice,
Eliminates a few disgraces
And shows that we are getting places
Not obviously differ-ent
From those away from which we went.
But though in moral codes we see
Some touches of variety,
Our morals seem to go forever
About the same, as if they'd never Realized the possibilities
Of acting in a way to please
A quorum of the weary gents

PLOT CHARGED IN BROOKLINE ELECTION

RECORD VOTE IS PREDICTED IN HOT FIGHT

Selectman Bremer Charges Attempt Is Made to Take Votes From Him

Invalids, cripples and even the blind visited the Brookline polls today in what will be a record vote before night in the town's fiercest campaign.

The polls opened at 7 a. m. after weeks of a hot campaign and the first few hours averaged 1000 voters each with the number swelling as the day grew.

Officials predicted that at least 15,000 of the 21,067 voters will record their choice before the 7 p. m. closing.

Unprecedented activity ushered in the ballots. Streets were fairly swarmed with hustling campaign automobiles, telephones were hot in homes and campaign headquarters, and, for the first time in years, the citizens' committee opened headquarters at Coolidge Corner.

By radio and door-to-door the campaign was waged, ending last night in a verbal barrage that included repudiation of mystery cards purporting to support Theodore G. Bremer for selectman.

They were signed with a name that does not appear in the Brookline or Boston directories and Bremer denied knowledge of them.

He charged their request to vote only for him was intended to injure his chances, as he is running on a slate with Chairman Charles F. Rowley. The two are opposed by William J. Hickey, Jr.

The contest for selectmen has developed the greatest interest, but the vote on the candidates for three places on the school committee holds a lively interest too.

Dr. Thomas P. Kendrick, Dr. Walter S. Burrage, George W. Wightman and Stewart Burchard are the candidates.

Spirited contests are on also for two-year and three-year terms as assessor.

WORK FOR 1800 AT NAVY YARD REQUESTED

Bay State Delegation Has "Most Satisfactory" Conference With Adams

Washington, Mar. 3 (AP)—Representatives of employes of the Boston Navy Yard and members of the Massachusetts Congressional delegation asked Secretary Adams of the Navy today to assign enough work to the yard to keep 1800 workers employed at all times.

After the interview Rep. Andrews, chairman of the Massachusetts delegation, said the interview was "most satisfactory."

ADAMS' CALLERS

The delegation was composed of Reps. Andrews, Douglass and Dallinger and Secretary Thomas McCarthy of the Charlestown Metal Trade Council, E. F. Gately, president of the Federal Employes Union, and John F. Cantwell, president of the International Association of Machinists.

"The delegation sought to secure enough work for the yard to keep a normal force of 1800 men busy at all times," said Rep. Andrews. "Several years ago the yard employed 2300 men.

ONLY 1400 NOW

"This has gradually declined until today there are only 1400 men employed. A normal force would be approximately 1800 and this is what we asked the secretary to provide work for."

Definite propositions as to work to be assigned the yard were made, but none would state just what had been discussed.

MANY UPSETS IN TOWN MEETINGS

Many town fathers nursed political sores today as a result of many upsets in yesterday's elections that were spirited contests in 76 towns.

One of the most surprising upsets was in Arlington, where Arthur P. Wyman, chairman of selectmen, was defeated by Leonard Collins, 5382 to 5057.

Hopeful proponents of "wet" legislation recalled the old phase, "As goes Hull, so goes the state," and saw a gleam of hope in the decision there on a liquid referendum. Voters decided, 942 to 91, that a referendum should pass urging changes in the liquor laws.

In Acton the caucus candidate for the school board was beaten. Arthur M. Whitcomb winning over Everett N. Montague 135 to 86.

Amherst, Ashburnham and Abington held quiet elections, but Ansand defeated George Sullivan, for 10 years a selectman.

Barnstable, Bedford, Belmont and Dartmouth experienced upsets, voters of the latter ousting Walter G. Slocum after nine years as a selectman.

Philip Woodsum, sticker candidate for school committee in Braintree, won by almost 2 to 1 over Waldo E. Niles in one of the biggest surprises.

There were no upsets in Clinton, but Democrats nearly gained their objective of years—that of unseating the Republicans.

Carver, Cohasset, Concord, Dedham, Dennis, Dighton, East Bridgewater and East Brookfield were others where the selections were made easily.

Essex, recalling the charge of assault against a school principal for administering punishment to a school boy, rejected a plan to prohibit corporal punishment in the schools.

Marion decided to conduct its own municipal coal yard, appropriating $15,0 for the purpose.

Lillian A. Shorey for 22 years town clerk of Scituate was defeated and nominations were: Ward-well M. Elwards, Republican school committeeman, and Democratic member of the cemetery committee.

A Harvard victory was recorded in Sudbury with Prof. John Clifford Hall elected moderator over George H. Clark by eight votes. Clark was moderator for 15 years.

In Watertown proponents of shorter hours elected all three candidates to the school board.

WOMAN LEAVES SEVEN MILLION

Salem, March 3—A report on the will of Mrs. Frances Elizabeth Preston of Swampscott, disposing of over $7,000,000, was filed today in Essex County Probate Court by the First National Bank of Boston, executors. The sole legatee was Mrs. Bessie Preston Cutler of Swampscott, Mrs. Preston's daughter.

The bulk of the estate is embodied in a $6,500,000 trust fund established before his death in 1921 by Mrs. Preston's husband, Andrews W. Preston, founder and president of the United Fruit Co. Mr. Preston's will provided that the income from the trust fund should go to his widow during her lifetime and then to his daughter.

Besides the trust fund, Mrs. Preston bequeathed to her daughter stocks and bonds to the amount of $322,000 and the exclusive Fenway Apartment Hotel, Hemingway st., Back Bay.

Martha Deshon of American Dies

Martha M. Deshon, for more than 20 years a member of the Composing Room force of the Boston American, died at her home in Ivy st., Back Bay, yesterday, after an illness of five months.

Miss Deshon was born in Maine and came to Boston nearly 30 years ago, when she joined Boston Typographical Union and worked in many of the larger printing offices of this city. She was considered one of the best women compositors in the city and was held in high esteem by all with whom she came in contact.

The funeral will be held from Shepherd's Undertaking Parlors on Main st., Whitman, Mass., at 2 p. m. Thursday. The body will be taken to Maine for burial.

Her mother, two brothers and a sister survive her.

Pardon Is Asked for Wife Slayer

A pardon for Marsool Casparian, serving a life sentence for the murder of his wife in Lynn in 1912 was asked for today at a hearing before the State Parole Board.

According to the records, Casparian shot his wife and wounded her sister, after a quarrel in their Lynn home. Later, at a hospital, Mrs. Casparian died.

Wants Freedom

Mrs. Alice May, descendant of Stephen Decatur, hero of war of 1812, says it was impossible to live with her husband, Ralph A. May, Boston broker, because of his cruelty.

MRS. MAY ASKS DIVORCE

Charging cruel and abusive treatment, Mrs. Alice May, a descendant of Stephen Decatur, naval hero of the War of 1812, and of Ichabod Goodwin, Civil War governor of New Hampshire, is seeking a divorce in Norfolk Probate Court, Dedham, from Ralph A. May. May is a Harvard graduate, class of 1904, and an investment broker in Boston.

The couple were married at Kittery Point, Me., in 1907. She had previously been divorced. In marrying May, she testified, she forfeited a home in Portsmouth and an annual income of $3500 from her first father-in-law.

Some months ago, she told the court, May's treatment made it impossible for her to continue living with him and she left, taking their two children.

Since that time, according to Mrs. May, her husband has annoyed her, and on one occasion, when she was driving on Newburyport turnpike, drove alongside her car in such a manner as to endanger her. During another encounter, she said, he called her "a lowdown, dishonorable woman."

Pussy Rides Engine Tender on 30-Mile Trip as Stowaway

The engine crew of the Greenbush-to-Boston train of the New Haven railroad found a stowaway today, cuddled up on the housing truck underneath the tender.

It was none other than Belinda, the pet pussy cat of the Greenbush roundhouse, who secreted herself in the hideaway before the train left Greenbush.

Engineer Eugene Nichols discovered kitty nonchalantly licking her paws after the 30-mile run, when the engine was hauled into the Boston roundhouse for inspection.

Lenten Prayer

Holy Hours

(Read Luke 9:28-36. Text, Luke 9:32.) And when they were awake, they saw his glory.

Mountain tops are never crowded. There is nothing to do there but look. Our holy hours are found high up, away from the throng, isolated from our common tasks. Then the mind is free to become receptive. There is nothing to do but look. In our busy life we need these retreats, in the company of a few kindred spirits, in order that we may become aware of our higher relationships. Only Luke gives up the incident of the disciples' sleeping. And what a place for their awakening! Then they saw what they had never seen before. If we were truly awake, might we not also see what we have been missing? If we could climb to where mere things do not obstruct the view, we, too, might catch glimpses of glory, never seen in the thick of life's affairs.

PRAYER: Our Father, wilt thou guide us to the places where we may see life transfigured? Comfort us, we pray thee, with renewed assurance that the great spirits of the past are of our company. Amen.

3 CONVICTED IN HOSPITAL THEFT

Three employes of the supply room at the City Hospital charged with stealing foodstuffs from the hospital were found guilty before Judge Thomas Dowd in Municipal court today. The men, Thomas Fleming, Jerome Ramsdell and Thomas Kelley, were given suspended sentences.

According to John Dowling, the absence from patients' diets of steaks and poultry known to have been purchased led him to set a police guard. Fleming, Ramsdell and Kelley were apprehended removing meats, butter and other supplies, it was testified.

BAIL IS CUT ON RED LEADERS

All was quiet on the East Boston front today as Max Judith Bersman, Patrick Devine and William Murdock, Lawrence strike leaders, languished in the immigration station bonds had

Atty. Harry Hoffman, of the International Labor Defense conferred with Immigration Commissioner Anna C. M. Tillinghast in a plea for a reduction of the $500 bail on each but it availed him nothing. Mrs Tillinghast said she refused to recommend reduction in bail because the three are not ordinary aliens, but dangerous agitators.

'FATHER' BACK IN HOSPITAL

Joseph T. Gebhardt of East Concord st., South End, who tried to establish himself as the father of a girl amnesia victim at City Hospital, was back today in Boston State Hospital from where, authorities aver, he escaped in April, 1925.

Gebhardt, it was revealed, was committed to the State Hospital on March 21, 1925. The denouement last night followed the positive identification of the girl at the hospital as Luella Cook of Riverside, R. I.

First intimation that Gebhardt had escaped from the institution came late yesterday when Dr. James May, superintendent of the hospital, notified Boston police that the man answered the description of the patient they had been seeking for six years. He was committed as an insane person by Chief Justice Perley Hall in Suffolk Superior Court, following his arrest in Boston on a serious criminal charge.

Postal Land Price May Be Arbitrated

The three million dollar workshop proposed for the Postoffice Department in the South Terminal railroad station may be submitted to a federal arbitration board on the question of the site if the money is appropriated by Congress at tomorrow's session, it was learned today.

The workshop is the plan of former Postmaster Charles R. Gow. Postmaster William E. Hurley admitted today the price submitted by the trustees of the Boston Terminal Company for the land may be referred to an arbitration board.

$500,000 ASKED FOR VETERANS' LOANS HERE

A second allotment of $500,000 was asked today by the Boston office of the Veterans' Bureau as checks for $426,000 went into the mails to cover the new bonus loans.

The checks covered loan applications made Saturday and yesterday and nearly absorbed the first $500,000 placed to the credit of Herbert H. Barraclough, regional disbursing officer.

The rush of veterans for the new loans was considered over today, those remaining apparently turning to the mails.

According to Col. William J. Blake, regional director of the bureau, the falling off in personal applications over the counter was offset by the increase in mail.

Approximately $20,000,000 has already been paid out by the treasury in form of soldiers' loans, it was said.

AMERICAN AIDS RELIEF

Col. Blake gave credit to the Boston Evening American for impressing upon the veterans, through its columns, that just as speedy and perhaps speedier service in obtaining loans would be obtained if applications were mailed to the Veterans' Bureau.

"Every veteran that comes in here with an application," said Col. Blake, "takes up the time of a clerk who, in the period it occupies to confer with the veteran, could be opening mail and starting 30 applications on their way through to a check in payment.

"I think the rush of the last few days here has been in the nature of clogging the neck of the bottle, and now that the neck has been cleared the work of mailing checks will proceed just as fast as the computing machines can arrive at the correct figures.

INTEREST FIGURED.

"We try to compute as exactly as possible the interest due from the time the check reaches the veteran, rather than giving him the short end by computing it from the time the check leaves here."

Today, in distinct contrast to yesterday and Saturday, there were less than 100 veterans waiting when the bureau opened, and as the morning advanced it never was necessary to have more than one line moving up to the receiving clerk's desk.

CUPID WINNER OVER DIVORCE, 47 TO 37

Hollywood, Cal., March 3—Dan Cupid still has a slight margin on the divorce courts here.

Dan marked up the marriage of William H. Boyd in December and the courts recorded the divorce of William H. Boyd in January. There were two different Boyds, but they illustrate the nip and tuck race.

One statistician said there were 47 marriages and 37 divorces among the motion picture prominent in 1930. So far this year Cupid is being outscored.

Charles Farrell and Virginia Valli have married. Kay Francis and Josephine Dunn took new husbands. Douglas MacLean has filed notice of intention to marry.

ON THE OTHER HAND

Against these are the divorces of Boyd, the former New York stage actor; Evelyn Laye, Kathleen Wilhime and Jean Harlow. Mrs. Fred Beetson has a suit pending against her husband who is an assistant to Will Hays. Ina Claire has announced her permanent separation from John Gilbert. Loretta Young has moved back home with her mother, intimating a disagreement with Grant Withers.

In December the other William H. Boyd flew with Dorothy Sebastian to Las Vegas, Nev., where they were married. But in the same month Pauline Frederick was divorced by Hugh C. Leighton, her fourth husband. One divorce of December were Gloria Swanson and the Marquis, the Tom Mixes, Robert Ames and his fourth wife, and Lina Basquette.

CUPID GETS BUSY

Billie Dove and Howard Hughes, the young millionaire picture producer, were among the 1930 divorced, but Hollywood seems to expect Cupid to bring forth an announcement from these two soon.

Will Hays was among those who married.

Other notable film marriages of 1930 were those of Bebe Daniels to Ben Lyon, Loretta Young to Grant Withers, Frances Marion to George Hill, Lowell Sherman to Helen Costello, Grace Menken to Bert Lytell, Jessica Lowe to Luther Reed, Hot Gibson to Sally Eilers, Dolores Del Rio to Cedric Gibbons, Nils Asther to Vivian Duncan, Margaret Mc-Millo to R. P. Fineman, John Gilbert to Harriet Bennett, Jetta Goudal to Harold Grieve, Bradley King to George H. Boyd, Lewis Stone to Hazel Woof, Betty Bond to Charles Hoover, Jr., Dorothy Lee to Jimmy Fidler, Gaston Glass to Lloba Karling, Natalie Moorhead to Alan Crosland, and Betty Francisco to Fred Sparling.

DIVORCES OF 1930

CUPID MUST MAKE SPURT

We show you here a number of fair moving picture notables whom Dan Cupid claimed were on his winning marriage list during last year. One statistician claims that the score was 47 to 37, in favor of marriage, in 1930, as against divorces. The same unofficial counter brings the sad news that Cupid is being outscored so far in 1931. There is yet a lot of hope that Dan Cupid will make a spurt, coming in leader in unofficial race of hearts, romance and hopes of love. We have indicated the husbands in each of the marriages.

SOMETHING WRONG

One of the counts in favor of Dan Cupid is Loretta Young, but rumors have it that Loretta is moving back with her mother, indicating disagreement with her husband of 1930—Grant Withers.

$50 Weekly for Tips

Do you want to get money for being alert? If so, the Boston Evening American offers the opportunity. Each week $50 in prizes will be given for news and picture tips telephoned in to the News-Tip Editor, at Liberty 4600.

What is a news tip? It's the information that something of interest to Greater Bostonians has taken place or will take place. Do you know, for instance, that an interesting picture is to be obtained, that an accident or an unusual event has happened, that there is going to be a business merger? That's a news tip.

If you have a camera, take a picture of some news event, while it is happening. Bring your action pictures to the American quick. Delay often spoils them for use.

There will be $15 given weekly for the best or the most unusual event news tip received; $10 for the next best; $5 for the next best, and $2 prizes for each of the 10 next most valuable tips.

One of the things impressed upon me by contact with the veterans was the great need of these loans. In every instance with one exception, the men asked for the full amount that they could draw, the chief reasons being unemployment and sickness.

Another outstanding thing that was impressed upon me was the fine spirit displayed by the men. Although most of them were in great need of the money many of them displayed a pessimistic attitude toward life. They all were happy to know that within a short time their needs would be taken care of, at least in part.

TODAY'S TRUE STORY

EASY KISSES

Winning of a Husband

GLORIA AND MABEL sat on the edges of their respective beds slowly undressing.

"You see," Gloria said, "I was right. You're prudish and foolish, Mabel. Honestly, you don't belong to this age at all. The idea of sticking up your nose at a little innocent necking. What do you think Bill and Allen take us out in the car for, to discuss the tariff and the Wickersham report?"

Mabel said very little, but her soft brown eyes dimmed with tears and her slender body drooped on the edge of the bed.

"I know I'm hopelessly old-fashioned, Gloria, but I can't help it. That's the way I am and I'll have to be. If Allen doesn't like it, I'm afraid he'll have to look for someone else."

"He's going to do just that, too," Gloria warned. "Why, I could see tonight that his interest in you is waning. Do you think he likes to sit there in the car like a bump on a log beside you—simply wasting that back seat. Bill gave it to you two on purpose. Why, it's humiliating for Allen—it really is."

Mabel burst into tears. The radiantly blonde Gloria was by her side in an instant comforting her. "Honey, don't cry. Just try to, well, loosen up a little. Don't be so prudish. It's your own good I'm thinking of.

Gloria fell asleep the moment she was in bed, but Mabel wept silently into her lonely pillow, wondering why she couldn't capture happiness as easily as Gloria did.

Gloria was wrong about Allen. He didn't altogether desert Mabel, even when he discovered that her law against necking was inexorable. True, his ardor waned. He never talked about marriage, during the long spring walks through Strickland woods, on romantic ferry boat rides, during brief parting moments at the 53rd st. apartment house.

Allen and Gloria, on the other hand, were planning to step down to City Hall almost any day, and days and indulge in matrimony. Only something always delayed the actual ceremony. Gloria was beamingly happy. So was Bill. But it became gradually apparent that Bill was always the one who had business appointments, or was going out of town or for some other reason couldn't be married that particular day.

"I'll lean against him driving home," she told herself. "I'll kiss his cheek and hold his arm. And maybe—ask him to stop the car for a minute."

On the way home she screwed up her courage. Now she would touch him, now put her lips to his cheek, tell him she cared more than any one else in the world. How often Gloria had rehearsed her on the very words to say. She put out her hands, felt the roughness of his coat, leaned ever so slightly toward him.

Bang! What in heavens name was that? A shot? No, a blowout. He was laughing. She trembled, and when he felt her trembling he took her in his arms suddenly and pressed her to him."

"Oh, Mabel," he said, "I shouldn't even kiss you, you're so different from other girls. I've been telling myself I mustn't touch you till I can ask you to marry me. Well, I'm making enough now so that we can live decently. I can't wait any longer for your kisses. I love you. I love every sly, sweet, decent thing in your body. There isn't another girl like you in the whole world, and I have the nerve to ask you to marry me."

The trembling had left her. She was thinking fearfully. "What if that blowout hadn't come just then! What if I'd stepped out of my character and kissed him even—just a little!"

"I love you too," she said softly, and a wave of happy relief passed through her body.

Later she burst into the room she shared with Gloria, full of her happy secret, but the blonde girl sat on the edge of her bed weeping as though her heart were broken.

Gloria admitted that it was. "He never really loved me at all," she sobbed. "He didn't have any intention of marrying me. Tonight I made him come right out and admit it. He—he's sick of me. Oh, Mabel, after those wonderful kisses. He didn't mean them.

"He was just taking all that he could get and now he's tired of me and in love with another girl. Marrying another girl. A common pissy little thing he met at the races. He's never even kissed her. I don't know what I'm going to do. I hate him, and I love him."

Mabel had to tell her then.

Gloria's tears turned to smiles. She kissed her roommate. "I'm a good enough sport to admit when I'm wrong," she said. "You were right about everything. Allen's a good man. He was wise enough to find out that he has a good background. I laughed at you for being old-fashioned. Bill's taught me a lesson. I'm glad a good man did not have to be wasted while I was learning. I'm glad I'm cured of him myself. I'm too old, Mabel. I'm going old-fashioned. No more necking. From now on, I'm cultivating coyness and girlish modesty. But honey, I guess you'll have to give me a few lessons."

She squeezed Mabel impulsively. "I'm so happy for you." That night it was the blonde girl who wept tears into her pillow and the dark-eyed girl who dreamed of romance and love.

Should He Wed for Money?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man 32 years old, over 6 feet tall and not so bad looking. A wealthy woman of 60 years wishes me to marry her but I think she's a little too old for me. Here is my problem: Should I wait until I found a woman a little younger? I hope that you or some of your readers will give me some advice in this.

UNEM-PLOYED.

Dear Unemployed: I'm old-fashioned myself and still have a feeling that people who marry should be in love, and that the mating should be within the bounds of biological reason. However, wealth enters a great deal into marriage these days—more than most of us admit—and from a purely material angle, there may be reason in your problem. I'm going to leave it to the readers. Perhaps they'll help you solve your problem. Should a man wait for a young girl to fall in love with, or should he marry an older woman for money? Let's have your side of it, column friends.

Mean Type of Man

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My pay envelope is terribly needed at home and I have a very good job as a stenographer. Every one in the office is fine and I'd be only too happy if it were not for the boss' brother-in-law, a married man who forces his unwelcome attentions on me till I'm almost insane. I don't want to tell him, and fear to do so, as it might be the means of losing my job. The other day there was some mix-up in the office accounts, and I heard this jackal of a man insinuate to the boss that it was my fault.

DISCOURAGED.

Dear Discouraged: I'd tell the man (when you very properly term a jackal) that if he didn't let you alone you complain to the boss. And if you're obliged to leave your position your reason for doing so will be given to the entire office as a protection to other girls who may have to put up with his brutishness. He is a coward or he wouldn't take advantage of his position to annoy you, and cowards never enjoy fighting in the open.

What's New in Coming Fashions

By AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, March 3—"Just yourself." Fashion says to the many who will wear some kind of suit this spring.

Suits are youthful looking. They're feminine. They're as sprightly as spring weather. And they make you feel more like singing and dancing than almost any other costume.

You can do many fashion things with a suit. Make good-looking color combinations with your blouse or wear all kinds of scarfs in the interesting new ways. Put a blouse collar outside and make the costume soft and frilly.

Spring suits were never easier to wear than this year. For two reasons. (1) There are enough different kinds to suit every type and (2) They're all softer and more dress-like than they used to be.

Fitted Waistline

Even the tailored suit has succumbed to the influence of femininity. It doesn't have rigid, set lines this year. Not quite as soft as the dressmaker-type suits, of course, but not the way it used to be, either.

Fitted a little at the waistline in a feminine way, with a skirt that flares slightly and is easy to walk in. And one of the new things to watch for is the wider lapels—which you can see in the sketch—almost wide enough to be called revers.

This is a fine suit if your figure is energetic and your shoulders straight. If not . . . better consider one of the other types that are easier fitting and more dress-like in their design.

The suit sketched has two of good details. (1) The narrow tuck collar. (2) The belted waistline. (3) The peplum effect. (4) The three-quarter sleeves—new and smart.

But there are many others just as good. Some even have this diagonal closing won't have any collar at all. Others will have collars with notched lapels. Some of them most of them, in fact—will have full length sleeves. Some will have the peplum section cut straight across the front.

Next: A collarless suit that buttons up the front
Right: The Vionnet type with diagonal closing and three-quarter sleeves

Whichever is the most becoming to you is the most fashionable for you.

Buttoned Front

Another new spring suit type is the one that buttons straight up the middle of the front (illustrated). Note that this one is collarless, has raglan sleeves, a wide belt and patch pockets.

Some of these buttoned-through-front suits don't button quite as high as the one sketched . . . and some button even higher. You can tell which is the most becoming by trying on all kinds. And if you like it with a narrower belt set in sleeves and slashed pockets, you can find those details, too.

Offer Plates to the Lady Guest First

By MRS. BEECKMAN.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Does the hostess after helping herself, pass things to the right or left? It seems logical that if the hostess serves, the plate should go left all around the table, but in passing things like cream, relish, sugar, shouldn't they be passed to the guest of honor on the right first? In this case, wouldn't everything go to the right?

WANTS TO KNOW.

Food items like cream, sugar, you relate, should be passed first to the woman at the honor. If the hostess or host is carving and serving from her or his place at the table, the first plate is passed to the woman as guest of honor, the woman who is seated at the right of the host, the second plate to the woman seated at the left of the host, and then on to the other women at table, according to their age and distinction. In this way charming courtesies can be shown to the guests and a special emphasis of hospitality can be shown.

Congratulating the Debutante

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Kindly advise me whether it is customary or proper to present the hostess with a gift at her coming-out party? It has been more or less the cause of discussion among my friends.

MISS F.

As our social gesture of congratulation to the debutante, as usually flowers. These flowers are very important to the debutante, for they are used to make her "background." A floral expression of the good wishes of her friends.

If you are a close relative or a close friend, you will probably wish to give her also some small gift to commemorate the important event.

Tiger Heart

By ROBERT T. SHANNON

"PERHAPS I should have said I was afraid of myself, afraid of the effect I might produce on others," Garson went on. "The way I have lived may have unfitted me for any other form of life, no matter how much I might desire it. When an animal stays too long with the pack it changes considerably from its domesticated brethren."

"An animal that runs too long with the pack," Connie said, "soon learns to leap at the throats and tear them."

"That," Garson admitted, "appears to be true, yet not inevitably so. There is such a thing, though, as a decent regard for other people," he said, "I mean—a man has no right to blight a woman's life—simply because he loves her."

It was evident to Connie that Garson had in his mind a thought that applied to her directly.

"You're not being yourself—you're not saying straight out what you think," she told him, critically. "What do you mean?"

In the darkness, he seemed to be holding himself aloof from her, rigidly reluctant to unbend. She smiled silently, unseen. Men after all, were the meekest, diffident of creatures. She had guessed rightly that he was afraid of her, that her femininity, in this secluded intimacy, appealed to and threw and keep him off balance.

"I mean I want you, but—"

Between them both there was a breath-catching instant—an electric tension, precarious, balancing of all life on the point of a needle . . .

"But I am desperately uncertain!" he declared in a voice, muffled with feeling. "The only thing I could bring you, the only thing I could offer you, would be unhappiness. What right have I to say these things at all to you? If whatever I said left you cold, it would all be so simple—but I'm not a fool. I know that I disorganize you. If I ask you to marry me and you said yes, your whole life might be ruined. I'm afraid I've strayed too far from the beaten path of humdrum to bring happiness to a girl like you—and you couldn't follow me into—into my jungles."

Her eyes, grown accustomed to the darkness, saw that his face was haggard, his hands restless; but she didn't avoid his stark gaze. He was thinking of marriage as a necessary fulfilment of love, and to her that combination was incidental to the fact that her own heart was melting.

"You are very thoughtful," she said, in a straightened voice.

Moving forward, disregarding all he had said, Garson took her into his arms and kissed her with a steady, prolonged intensity. Her eyes closed, she surrendered wholly, her senses swimming.

"I shouldn't have done that," he said" drawing back but his speech was only mechanically apologetic. Connie, her eyes impaid as dark as ink, had no reply, something had gone out of her virginal reserve, forever.

Released from his arms, she felt herself weak and swaying. Against the cushion of the seat she fell back supinely. What she had invited came upon her with the stunning effect of a collision; as through a great weariness, she could see what was happening to her for more was involved than any surface stirring of the senses. The instinctive, age-old habits of automatic defense were dead, killed.

"I shouldn't have done that," he reiterated. "You shouldn't have let me."

"I couldn't help it," she whispered.

With an involuntary, irresistible movement he took her again into his arms and their lips met, magnetically intoxicated, fiendlike with eagerness. No effort came from Connie to avoid him; she responded to his embrace with an urge as compelling as his own. When he released her, she was confused in her mind, as though she were emerging from a faint.

"We couldn't help it—it was all takes out of our hands, Connie," he said, tenderly. "Words, language are nothing in the face of the other."

A dazed smile was her only answer; a giant weariness gripped her whole body. But he was right a force stronger than their intellects had decided everything for them.

"There is only one thing left for us to do," he said, his voice laboring out of turmoil. "We can't have anything stand between us now. It would be tootion tragic. We won't let ourselves risk being carried apart—separated by accident."

"You must know best about that," she agreed.

But coherent thought, orderly intentions, were stormed-tossed in the rising tide of their emotions.

"I wanted to spare you the risk of being bound to me," he articulated. "I want for you all happiness . . . not just these things . . . these earthquakes . . ."

There were other words, but they were lost, tossed up, swept away, in the intense electrical charge of their embrace.....

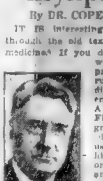
Break of Skin May Induce Erysipelas

By DR. COPELAND.

IT IS interesting to observe through the old text books on medicine. If you did this, you probably would run across a disease spoken of as St. Anthony's Fire." It was usually spread by a break in the skin, as from one person to another.



Dr. Copeland

Because, of this, the disease was regarded as being contagious. Today it is not considered, nor is it frequently seen.

There are several forms of the ailment the most common being a variety in which the skin is involved. This disease is always preceded by a wound, a scratch, or a break of the skin. This may have been very slight and unnoticed and may not have been noticed at all.

There is always sudden fever, with chill and intense local redness of the part involved. The original infection may be in the mouth, nostril, throat, ear, between the fingers or toes, at the margin of a nail, or in the folds of the skin itself.

Erysipelas is believed to be due to a certain germ, called the "streptococcus." It spreads rapidly from one part of the body to another.

On the first or second day there is a redness of the skin. The redness spreads in patches There are swelling and pain under the skin. These symptoms are followed by intense burning and itching.

The diet should be nutritious but light. Water should be given in great amount. If the fever is high the patient should be bathed and sponged frequently. Local applications are frequently applied, but all the treatment should only be given upon the advice of a physician.

Answers to Health Queries

MRS. F. A. C. Q—My two children have had whooping cough for 3 weeks. They are two and six years of age. How long will I keep them away from other children in order to prevent the spread of the disease?

A—They should be kept away from other children until all signs of the disease have disappeared. Your doctor will advise you.

• • •

CONSTANT READER. Q—Why do I feel the heat so much and yet do not perspire? Would this be a cause for anxiety?

A—If you exercise sufficiently you should perspire. Drink copious of water between meals, eat lightly, but take nourishing foods and keep the system in proper working order.

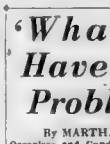
'What to Have' Is Problem

By MARTHA LEE

Organizer and Conductor of New England's Largest Housekeepers' Club of Over 37,000

IF YOU entertain often you'll find it an excellent investment to take time soon and many days to make out some menus that contain home made foods that you have found popular with your friends. This will save you collecting an important item (course) to the last minute when you're apt to send a hasty collection. "What shall we have."



Martha Lee

For the menus already written and a well stocked emergency shelf gives you the preparedness that's the watchword of the resourceful hostess.

Lobster, salmon, shrimp, tuna fish and shad roe are all useful—the lobster for a lobster stew on a cold night or a salad for a warm one, or deviled for any time—and fine for a late supper, dipped in seasoned flour and browned delicately in a little bacon fat and served with crisp bacon, and thin brown bread sandwiches. Even dried beef separated, dusted with a little sifted flour and heated up in hot cream and served on toast points is not to be despised. And, if it's at all possible, a hot baked potato to go with it.

Luncheon tongue is handy, sliced, heated in a little fresh butter and laid in overlapping slices around a mound of boiled spinach garnished with slices of hard-boiled eggs. There's a certain delicious taste about a continuous run of rounds of hot buttered toast with a poached egg atop.

For a home made supper or emergency luncheon, the w is the whole chicken in tin. In delicious aspic jelly. Open can be served cold or heated with the jelly as a gravy and served with It is now boiled potatoes rolled in melted butter and sprinkled with parsley and fresh peas. Or you can add a cup of cream to the jelly and thicken it a little, season it to taste and cut up the chicken to heat in it. A few raw sliced onions will give zest or a little onion salt if you prefer.

We've some special menus for Sunday suppers and bridge luncheons if you'd care to have them. A line to Mrs. Charles N. Colstad, 350 South Main st. Attleboro.

Castoria...for CHILDREN'S ailments

ARE you prepared to render first aid and quick comfort the moment your youngster has an upset of any sort? Could you do the right thing—promptly—should a real emergency came without warning—perhaps tonight? Castoria is a mother's standby at such times. There is nothing like it for colics, and nothing better for everyday use. For a sudden attack of colic, or for the gentle relief of constipation; to allay a feverish spell, or to soothe a fretful baby that can't sleep. This pure vegetable preparation is always ready to ease an ailing youngster. It is just as harmless as the recipe on the wrapper reads. If you see Chas. H. Fletcher's signature, it is genuine Castoria. It is harmless to the smallest infant; doctors will tell you so

You can tell from the formula on the wrapper how mild it is, and how good for little systems. But contigue with Castoria until a child is grown.

One Community Has Rebuffed Rule of Jazz

Columbus, Ohio's Capital, Is American Rarity, a Planned City

—By B. C. Forbes—

Columbus, O., March 3—Visiting this city for the first time, one gets the impression of spaciousness. Then you learn the reason: On the eve of the War of 1812 the Ohio Legislature, after thorough investigation, decided to establish the State capital near the geographical center of the State, a forested site was selected at the confluence of the Olentangy and Scioto rivers, two squares were reserved for the State, for the Capitol building, the other for penitentiary.

B. C. Forbes

• • •

The 1930 census gave Columbus 290,564 inhabitants, but metropolitan Columbus has 335,000 population.

• • •

A majestic civic center is rising. It already embraces a palatial new municipal building, police and fire department headquarters, the foundations of a new state office building, and evidence of preparations for other great structures. Here too, is the pride of Columbians, the Deshler-Wallick Hotel, a magnificent, mighty structure rising to a height exceeding the Washington Monument.

Other notable buildings are the State Capital, the State Judiciary Building, Post Office, Federal Building, Chamber of Commerce. Various other important state institutions are also located here.

• • •

Although old, Columbus is up-to-the minute. Port Columbus, municipally-owned flying field, is one of the finest airports in the world. It boasts the finest air-rail passenger station in the United States. It is Eastern headquarters of the Trans-continental Air Transport-Maddux Lines, operating between New York and Los Angeles, carrying passengers, mail and express.

The city's transportation facilities include five trunk lines, two electric lines, 23 motor bus and passenger lines, 20 motor freight lines, three airmail and passenger airplane lines.

• • •

The city's strategic location has attracted 600 manufacturing establishments. Iron and steel manufacture represent 30 per cent of the total value of local products—chiefly foundry and machine shop products, including mining machinery, road building machinery, oil derricks and roller bearings. Food products galore are manufactured here. Next in importance come the shoe industry, printing and publishing, lumber and mill work.

There are 10 national and state banks and no fewer than 27 building and loan associations, indicating a thrifty people.

• • •

The Ohio State University draws 15,000 students, a total exceeded by only three other state universities. Columbus is old enough to have developed culture—and it has. The State Department of Education is also here. Other educational institutions include two denominational colleges and 18 high schools.

The local Women's Music Club is said to be the largest of its kind in the country. It enrolls for its concerts best known artists of the world. A new gallery of fine arts and the museum at the state university bear further testimony of the community's keen interest in the finer things of life. Indeed, Columbus rightly claims a place of leadership among the art and culture centers of the Middle West.

• • •

Thanks to its ideal geographical location and to its attractiveness, Columbus is becoming a famous convention city. Last year more than 300 conventions were held. "You can get from almost anywhere to Columbus overnight," you are told. And if you look at the map, you will see that there is much truth in that claim.

• • •

The visitor comes away with the feeling that here is a substantial, comfortable, uncrowded, homey city where life is lived rationally and where jazz has not annihilated the higher and more desirable phases of family and community life.

LARGEST BOARD OF DIRECTORS TO BE REDUCED

By FRANK H. MELOON

North American Aviation, Inc., mentioned in this column yesterday, has the largest list of directors known in Wall Street history. No fewer than three score names are on this list today. When stockholders meet March 12 it is proposed to cut it 25 per cent to 45. Even then the board will rank among the largest in the country. The company, headed by Thomas A. Morgan as president, owns stocks of several aviation companies. Its directorate includes officials of banks, motor and oil companies in addition to aviation issues.

Our newest American railroad president is Charles T. O'Neal, who has just been elected president of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad. Mr. O'Neal is a former war-time major in the U. S. Army. The railroad world is said to have a larger percentage of executives who have worked up from the ranks than any other single division of industry.

A former New Haven president once told the writer that the reason few college men reach the top in railroading is because they are generally unwilling to work their way up from the foot of the ladder. This perhaps applied to the college men of this president's day—he was himself a college graduate—but it is to be doubted if it applies now, when the college attendance personnel is much more far-reaching.

Many were reported sceptical regarding the stock market's recent advance. Their attitude already cost them the chance of sharing in numerous 100 per cent advances from not distant lows.

• • •

In State st., where statistics are apt to be best understood and taken at real value, one can hear interesting criticisms offered regarding them. When a recent table was issued, showing "per cent" increases or declines in auto accidents in Massachusetts sections, one broker cited Newburyport, which wasn't in the list. He showed that, if the Merrimac Valley port had had one less auto fatality last year, it would have had 100 per cent less than it did.

Recent strength in the markets indicates an upturn in business is likely to begin before July 1, Hugh Bancroft, president of the Boston News Bureau and Dow, Jones & Co., Inc., publishers of the Wall Street Journal, states. In discussing the business situation, Mr. Bancroft notes the resumption of activity in the automobile and cotton textile industries. He points a cautioning finger, however, to the position of the railway earnings and electrical power production indices.

• • •

"While there has been a definite improvement over the December business, there has not been as much as a normal seasonal improvement in business yet," said Mr. Bancroft. "We have not yet reached the bottom, but I am confident that we are very near it. There has been a certain improvement in some lines, and it strongly looks as though they had already passed the low point.

"I shouldn't be surprised if it proved we had already passed the low point in the financial markets, with both stocks and bonds."

Inland Steel Has Operations Higher

Chicago, March 3 Operations of Inland Steel Co. have been increased to 60 per cent of capacity from 50 per cent due to the accumulation of a large number of miscellaneous orders. Steel ingot production in the Chicago territory is 55 per cent of capacity, a gain of 2 per cent to 3 per cent over preceding week.

Associated Gas in Improved Earnings

Associated Gas & Electric system reports for 1930 net income of $17,501,068 after taxes, preferred dividends of subsidiary and affiliated companies, interest and depreciation, against actual net income in 1929 of $16,183,945 shown in company's phamphlet report. Preliminary net reported for 1929 was $16,645,984.

Winchester Arms Time Is Extended

Protective committees representing holders of Winchester Repeating Arms Co. of Delaware 6½ per cent debentures due Feb. 1 1934, and Winchester Repeating Arms Co. of Connecticut first mortgage 7½ per cent bonds due April 1 1941, announce the time for deposit of the issues has been extended to April 1.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Wall street accepted as a good sign today the fact that the market grew dull when downward drifting became pronounced. Concensus of opinion in the Street was that the market was likely to be a more quiet affair for a time than in the recent past.

Motors Are Firm With Expansion

Motor shares were firm today, reflecting mirroring in increases in March production schedules by various motor companies is a direct reflection of a larger retail demand which developed during February. Leading executives are most concerned at this time in whether the upturn in retail consumption is seasonal, whether it has been prompted by unusual open weather conditions, or whether it is beginning of a real revival.

How Motor Output Is Being Raised

Ford has not released official figures for this month, but various reports indicate that at least a 100,000 schedule will be attempted, which will compare with an estimated 80,000 for February. Chevrolet will increase 12,000 cars to 75,013, Studebaker 2000 to 6000, Oakland-Pontiac 2600 to 12,600, Oldsmobile 1500 to 7500, and Buick 2100 to 9000. Hudson reports that March schedules will be 36 per cent greater than February. Overland will increase 3000 cars to 10,000, against 7000 in February.

Niagara-St. Regis Issues Are Steady

Niagara Hudson Power and St. Regis Paper moved in a narrow range most of today's session. St. Regis is to exchange the 4,070,000 shares of Niagara Hudson common which it owns for 2,170,666 shares of United Corp. common.

Remington Rand Is Sold Lower

Remington Rand slipped back over 2 points today on dividend omission. In connection with the omission of the common dividend, directors stated they had decided to conserve the assets and build up surplus, which is now greater than at the time dividends were started on the common stock in November, 1929.

Big Bears Make Test of Market

Big bear operators have been prominent in this week's weakness and it is an open question whether their pressure can induce general liquidation sufficient to overcome the support which will be furnished by "bull pools."

Vanadium Favored as Market Index

One of the favored stocks of prominent speculators on new reactions is Vanadium, and just as this issue provided an index to the market's setback, so is it likely to perform a similar function in forecasting a change in speculative conditions for the immediate future.

Optimistic on National Surety

On several occasions the last few weeks small accumulation has taken place in National Surety. The buying has been credited to interests close to the management, who are optimistic on the long-range outlook for the organization. Officials of the company are confident that during the next 10 years the underwriting loss ratio will be substantially lower than in the past.

Opinions Differ in Anaconda

A difference of opinion exists concerning the market for Anaconda in the next few weeks. Important interests have been picking up the stock on all recent reactions on the theory that the shares could be leaders in any advance in the metal group. Because of pessimistic opinions in trading circles, considerable short selling has been in progress in the issue at times. That has been making for a good technical market condition.

Pool Operation in Lima Locomotive

A pool operation has been in progress in Lima Locomotive at times recently. That has become evident through various unconfirmed rumors which have been circulated. One rumor was that the company was about to close a contract from the Soviet. Nothing official was heard on the subject and it was believed generally that the report was prompted by the fact that both American Locomotive and Baldwin had taken small Russian orders recently.

Investment Buying Is in Drug, Inc.

Many issues have not moved in proportion with the general list in the past upward movements. Drug Inc. is one of these. The explanation heard around the street is that the stock has lacked aggressive market sponsorship during the periods of strength. Investment buying in the stock has been rumored because of a yield of around 5½ per cent and in view of the fact that the company covered its dividend requirements last year by a margin of 65 per cent.

Cutten Active Again in Carbide

New United Gas Financing Doubted

Rumors that United Gas Improvement contemplated additional financing in the near future were discredited in well-posted circles.

Bond Movements in New York Narrow

New York, March 3—Bonds continued to move in a narrow range today and the list made little headway in either direction, as investors remained lukewarm toward domestic obligations. The foreign section was spotty, but inclined toward higher levels as it has been for a fortnight or more.

PRICES MOSTLY LOWER IN BOSTON

Stock prices were mostly off in today's dealings on the Boston Exchange. Changes ranged from fractions to 5 points or more. Rails were firm after a week of lowering prices.

Atchison gained nearly 2 points and Maine Central was a point higher. Brown & Co. preferred made its first appearance in weeks in today's dealings. The issue was 5 points lower.

Torrington dropped 2 and Hygrade Lamp and Mergenthaler each eased a point. Eastern Gas & Fuel preferred gained 1¼. General Capital and Anaconda each added fractionally.

Eastern Steamship was down over a point. Minor losses were shown for Edison, Gillettes and American Telephone.

Comparison of the largest stockholders of the New Haven Railroad as of Feb. 27, 1931, with lists of the twenty largest holders one and two years ago, reveals some interesting shifts in major ownership.

As might be expected, the most striking change is the steady increase in Pennsylvania Railroad holdings. It had registered in its name February 27, 296,025 shares, against 176,025 March 31, 1930, and 73,025 shares April 1, 1929, an increase within one year of over 64 per cent, and in two years of 35 per cent.

The holding February 27 was 14.36 per cent. of the combined New Haven common and preferred stock, agreeing with percentage figure recently given by General Atterbury to the Massachusetts legislative transportation committee.

Curb Market Stays in Narrow Range

New York, March 3—Curb market leaders moved in a narrow range for the most part today. Little attention was paid marketwise to possible important realignments in the electric power field in New York state as the result of United Corp's prospective acquisition of a dominant position in Niagara Hudson through the exchange with St. Regis paper.

Large Pipe Order Given A. O. Smith

Chicago, March 3—A. O. Smith Corp. has been allotted an order for an additional 100 miles of 24-inch gas line pipe, amounting to 23,000 tons by Continental Construction Co. for Chicago natural gas line. This order brings total pipe orders received by A. O. Smith on the Chicago line to 50 miles. Lines when completed will be 970 miles long.

Mass. Financing Is at Low Rate

State Treasurer Hurley states that Commonwealth of Massachusetts received the lowest rate of interest ever obtained on its $2,000,000 loan dated March 5 and due Nov. 23, which was sold to First National Bank, National Shawmut Bank and Atlantic National Bank at 1.90 per cent.

Exports of Grains Advanced Sharply

Washington, March 3 (AP)—Grain exports last week were 282,000 bushels as compared with 226,000 bushels the previous week, and 1,347,000 bushels in the corresponding week last year.

Grains Are Uneven in Chicago Market

Chicago, March 3—Grains were uneven today. Wheat was ⅛c up to ⅛c off, corn unchanged to ⅛c down and oats unchanged to ⅛c lower.

PRICE CHANGES STAY NARROW IN WALL ST.

New York, March 3—In Wall Street transactions today speculative enthusiasm appeared to have been squelched by the sharp decline of the previous session, but bears as well as bulls were cautious

Price trends were in the main lower, but changes remained narrow, and principal shares held fairly steady. Trading slackened.

STEEL NEWS AWAITED

The market was inclined to pay more attention to earnings statements, dividend actions and trade news than of late. Traders were rather apprehensive over tomorrow's weekly steel trade reviews

Utilities, amusements, chemicals and several industrial specialties were under considerable pressure at times

North American, United Carbon, Columbian Carbon, North American, Purity Baking, Western Union, Case, Johns Manville, Remington Rand and Montgomery Ward were among issues losing 2 to 3 points

Losses of a point or so were numerous, embracing such issues as U. S. Steel, General Electric, American Telephone, Radio Corp., Warner Bros., Paramount, Baltimore & Ohio, American Water Works and National Power & Light

Comment on the business situation by Gerard Swope, president of General Electric, who said he expected conditions to get "no worse" although he did not think sentiment should get "too buoyant," summed up the attitude of several important interests in the financial district, which appears to have tempered speculative sentiment

DIVIDEND OMISSIONS

Dividend omissions by Remington Rand and United Carbon were responsible for selling of those issues, while Johns-Manville's report showing 1930 net of only $3.66 a share, against $8.09 in 1929, brought some selling into that issue.

Montgomery Ward's decline followed yesterday's report of Sears Roebuck's sales for the second period of its 13-month calendar, showing about the same decline from last year as was reported for the first period. This did not tend to forecast a favorable showing by its chief competitor.

Credit conditions were still a little firmer, with the month-end settlements taking up the slack in the call loan market. There were no funds offered in the outside market under the loan desk rate of 1½ per cent.

The consolidated condition statement of weekly reporting member banks, however, was favorable, showing a reduction of $12,000,000 in loans on securities, in the period in which brokers' loans advanced $26,000,000.

UNITED CORP. TO EXCHANGE

United Corp. and St Regis Paper Co. have made a contract under which St. Regis Paper Co. will exchange the 4,070,000 common shares of Niagara Hudson Power Corp. owned by it for 2,170,666 shares of United Corp. common.

United Corp. will become the largest single owner of Niagara Hudson Power common, bringing its total to 5,743,250 shares or about 22 per cent of the 26,001,928 shares outstanding at close of the year.

On Monday's closing price of 25⅜ for United Corp. and 13¾ for Niagara Hudson Power both were selling on practically a parity on basis of the exchange offer, which amounts roughly to 1.84 shares of Niagara Hudson for each share of United.

This development is the first effort by United Corp. since last spring to increase its holdings in Atlantic Seaboard utilities. The last similar transaction was an exchange offer for Columbia Gas & Electric common.

Royal Dutch Will Call in Debentures

New York, March 3—Announcement is made that the Royal Dutch Company plans to redeem early in May all of the outstanding 50-year 5 per cent debentures which were issued to the amount of 28,500,000 guilders in 1930. The debentures will be redeemed at 102½ and interest. No new financing will be necessary.

A year ago the company through Dillon, Read & Co and their associates sold $40,000,000 of 4 per cent debentures.

Interstate Public Net $2.30 a Share

New York, March 3—Interstate Public Service Co. (controlled by Midland United Co.) reports for 1930 net of $1,605,141, equivalent to $2.30 a share on combined 75,000 shares (par $100) and 163,199 shares of no-par common, against $1,840,927, or $4.93 a share, on combined 63,103 shares (par $100) and 94,420 no-par common stocks in 1929.

Ipswich Loan Is Awarded in Boston

Ipswich awarded to Shawmut Corp. at 2.25 per cent, a $150,000 loan due $100,000 Oct. 10 and $50,000 Nov. 10. Other bidders were: Merchants National Bank 2.34 per cent; W. O. Gay & Co., 2.36 per cent and Grafton Company 2.39 per cent.

ADVICE TO INVESTORS IS FREE

Before you buy or sell stocks or bonds, you ought to secure unbiased expert advice. Send your investment inquiries with stamp to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Sq., Boston. All replies are made by mail direct.

STOCKS AND BONDS

M. W. Brookline—My securities are $100 each Baltimore & Ohio 4s 1948, American Smelting & Refining 5s, 1947, Brooklyn Edison 5s, 1949, St Louis-San Francisco Railway 4s, 1950, ten shares each Bangor & Aroostook preferred, Public Service of New Jersey 7 per cent preferred, Republic Iron & Steel preferred, United States Rubber preferred, West Penn Electric 6 per cent preferred, fifty General Electric special, and twenty-five each International Nickel and Standard Brands. What is your opinion of them? I have $1000 in a savings bank which I want to invest. What shall I buy?

Ans.—There is no need for you to buy more securities at this time. Wait until you have saved another $1000. The bonds you have are sound and you can count on an income from most of your stocks. The exceptions are United States Rubber preferred and Republic Iron & Steel preferred. No dividends have been distributed on the former since February, 1928. Quarterly dividend of $1.50 a share expected on the latter January 1, 1931, was omitted because of necessity of conserving cash. Though dividend payers, International Nickel and Standard Brands are speculative. Earnings are not impressive.

ANOTHER STOCK

E. E. Malden—On your advice, about two years ago, I bought $2000 Prudence Company 5½s and 20 shares F. W. Woolworth. Now I want to buy another stock. How about General Foods?

Ans.—General Foods has paid dividends in varying amounts from 1922; current $3 rate since 100 per cent stock dividend July, 1929. Net income for nine months ended September 30, 1930, was equivalent to $2.83 for similar period in 1929. In that year earnings were $3.89 a share and in 1928, $3.75. At recent levels the yield was 5½ per cent. If you like that income we see no reason for withholding approval of a reasonable purchase. Do not use all your cash. The bonds and the stock you have are sound.

Course of Deflation Is Run, Says Muller

New York, March 3—Deflation has run so full a course that it is probably safe to look forward to better conditions, or at least a sound basis for stabilization during 1931, William S. Muller, president of the New York Curb Exchange, declares in his annual report for the year of 1930, just issued to members. He pointed out:

"All nations have variously enjoyed good and bad times in their history, as in ours, but fortunately the cyclical changes in the United States rest on a different foundation than elsewhere throughout the world. The cycle of progress, as we know it here, obtains its impulse from certain human factors that are more prominent in this country.

No matter how it may find its outlet from one decade to the next, it is the unbounded hope and courage of the American people that has pulled them up to the peaks of industrial advancement which stand as milestones in our economic history."

Referring to the activities of the Curb Exchange itself, Mr. Muller said he was especially pleased to report on the success of the new money post established April 23, 1930. At the end of the calendar year a total of $61,000,000 was loaned, he said, and during this period loans from $100,000 to $1,000,000, at a rate ranging from 2 per cent to 4½ per cent have been placed.

The past eight months, however, have been no true picture to what extent the post can and will be used, he said, as only a limited number of brokerage houses are represented, which is partly due to the abundance of outside money, reducing rates to a figure where brokers find it easier and cheaper to borrow at their own banks.

He anticipates, when trading activity is renewed and the public again enters the stock market, the slack in money will be taken in and this will have a tendency to bring in many of the "special loans" now outstanding.

Stating that it is now well known that the exchange extends its scope as a security market to an international basis and that approximately 140 seasoned foreign issues are traded in on the Curb Exchange in the form of certificates of deposit issued by American banking institutions, Mr. Muller admitted these foreign listings has been a secondary function of the exchange to date, but that the prospects of further extending the international scope of this department are promising in the years immediately ahead.

Atchison Loading Figures Are Up

Chicago, March 3—In week ended February 28 Atchison handled 27,130 cars, against 27,065 in the preceding week. Loadings in February totaled 110,263 cars, against 129,567 in January and 137,498 in February, 1930.

Pneumatic Tires Made Compulsory

London, March 3—Use of pneumatic tires on heavy motor vehicles has been made compulsory in England. This is a measure to reduce wear and tear on the roads of the country and reduce accident hazards.

FANNING
—With GEORGE UNDERWOOD—

THE THROW THAT WON FOR HOLY CROSS

Wherein We Are Asked to Settle Baseball Debate ↕ And Put Heap Big Redskin Ahead of Cobb and Wagner

JIM CONNOLLY, author of those thrilling tales of the salty ... and member of Uncle Sam's first Olympic team, Jim McCluskey, the merry mortician of Chelsea; Logan McLean, the barrister; Joe Dunn, the pedagogue; Dan Monahan, who scattered Dayton scales all over the universe; Dr. Edward Denning, explorer of interiors; Maj. Batts of the Back Bay Fusiliers and your humble columnist, week-ending in Jefferson, pipes and cigars lit, feet on the rail, were sitting out under the stars on Ma Prendergast's front porch.

J. V. CONNOLLY.

It was clear as a bell up there in the eternal hills. We watched them, blue and blue-white under the moonlight, tumbling away in the distance. The stars, "the forget me nots of the angels," seemed so close you could reach up and pluck them.

And what were we fanning on, there in the moonlight? It was a night to commune with Nature. There was an eeriness in the moonlight. Romance rode the keen mountain air. Did Connolly's thoughts turn to the briny deep? Did McGlinchey call up ghosts and Dan Monahan whisper of wailing banshees? Did "Doc" Denning elucidate on the vermiform appendix and Maj. Batts orate on his campaigns among the wild Africans at Camp Devens?

Folks, durned if they would let us get away from "shop" for even a few precious, stolen minutes. What are snowy hills asleep in the white moonlight to baseball fans? Baseball was the slogan of the evening and who was the greatest ball player each ever had seen the subject for debate.

"King Kelly," declared Connolly, closing his jaws with a snap that was intended to discourage argument.

"Ty Cobb," opined barrister McLean. "Larry Lajoie," was schoolteacher Dunn's brief bet. Dan Monahan thought the Dutchman, Hans Wagner, led the parade. Doc Denning agreed with him. Thinking perhaps he might coax a pass from Bob Quinn, if only news of his stand could be taken to Pensacola, Maj. Batts hemmed and hawed and tried to find a "wonder" among this year's Red Sox. One fierce glare from the eagle orbs of Connolly and Maj. Batts retreated in close formation.

THE DEBATE became so hot they feared they would do each other bodily injury. They picked out this humble sports writer as the goat and asked us to give a decision. We have been in the Wagner-Cobb-Lajoie debates before, so we sidestepped and countered with the remark the greatest ball player that we ever saw was an Indian

"Chief Bender?" queried Maj. Batts.

"Chief Myers?" asked McLean.

"Bender was a great pitcher," we answered and Myers a great catcher, but the Chippewa sachem and the Mission Indian from California, great as they were, couldn't compare with Louis Sockalexis, the tall, lean Penobscot from Old Town, Me.

"I remember him," said Batts. "He was an older brother of Andrew Sockalexis, the Marathon runner.

"I saw him make his debut in New York," remarked Connolly. "He was with Cleveland then and when he stepped to the bat and caught one of Amos Rusie's swiftest shoots—and there was one of the speediest pitchers the big leagues ever had—on the nose and sent the ball roaring over Mike Tiernan's head for a home run the stands were dumfounded."

LOUIS BROTHER.

THEN WE told them of one of the greatest games Sockalexis ever played and the greatest game we ever saw made in baseball.

It was not a big league game. It was a duel between Holy Cross and Georgetown up on the old stadium on St. James Hill in Worcester. Some of the old Purple boys remember the field and the clump of willows far, far back of the outfield.

Tim Hurst was umpiring. In those days the Holy Cross games were handled by the cream of the big league umpires. Hurst, Gaffney, Johnston, O'Day and Tom Lynch, president of the National League, all umpired on St. James Hill. Tim was working the day Sockalexis won for Holy Cross.

IT MEMORY is right the teams went into the ninth with the score 2 to 1 in favor of Holy Cross. Georgetown at bat. Billy Maloney got on base and worked around to third, with one out. George Mahoney, later with Boston, was at bat. Mahoney could hit 'em a mile. Papalau, later with Cleveland and Brooklyn, was in the box for the Purple, and Mike Powers, later with the Athletics, was relieving him.

With the speedy Maloney prancing on third, the hard-hitting Mahoney caught one of Papalau's headers on the nose and straightened it out into the roaring drive that apparently would go far over Sockalexis' head and roll to the "Willows."

But with a greyhound's burst Sockalexis raced back and by wonderful timing and eye scan in the right position and set for the throw when he made the catch.

"Go," roared Hurst when the ball dropped into the Indian's glove, and the swift-footed Maloney streaked for home. Billy brought up with a long slide—only to find Sockalexis' rifle bullet throw had beaten him.

"You out," bellowed Hurst, and then, scratching his red head, he cased in wonderment out into deep center, from where Sockalexis had made the amazing throw for the double play which had saved the game.

"To this day, George, I can't understand how in hell that Injun done it!"

Neither can we.

FIREWATER Nemesis of the redskin, ruined poor Louis' baseball career, and he died a victim of the Great White Plague. Up in Old Town they tell how a friend took away a bottle from Lou and tossed it into the stove. Louis returned with another bottle. The friend took that away and put it in the stove, too. Bang! The lids were blown off the stove and the window panes smashed. Louis had filled that second bottle with gunpowder.

TINY ROEBUCK.

Speaking of Injuns, look at the redskins who have invaded wrestling. Off hand, there are Chief Montour, Chief Red Cloud, Tiny Roebuck and Tom Marvin.

Button! Button! Who'll get it on the button when Carnera and Maloney mix in Miami on Thursday night? That Battle of the Busted Rib isn't a fight. It is a guessing game.

Miami had its cyclone. If Shamus topples over the Ambling Alp Florida will think it was hit by an earthquake. So great will be the fall the seismograph at Harvard is liable to be knocked out of joint.

When Carnera sloshed into the Atlantic for a swim the tide arose six inches and wet the dimple on a bathing beauty's knee.

Miami went dry for a day. It seems that Prime took another swim and caused a tidal wave to roll over towards Bimini, engulfing a whole fleet of rum ships.

We have been trying hard and maybe by tomorrow we will be able to get a little serious over that Carnera-Maloney shindy. So many things have happened down there in the shade of the sheltering palm so one can be blamed for thinking it a Big Joke.

Water Buffalo Slain by Infuriated Tiger in Arena Battle

A silly battle between human beings armed with harmless boxing gloves is not sufficient to relieve the ennui of a Maharajah in his native India. At least, it was not enough to leaven the deadly monotony of life for at least one of the native leaders.

This prince of the blood wants duels to the death, and he sought the royal blood of the jungle to satisfy his thirst for gore.

Frank Buck in his fascinating narrative, "Bring 'Em Back Alive," describes a battle between a Royal Bengal tiger and a powerful water buffalo bull in which both principals paid the supreme price of royal boredom.

CHAPTER IV.

Environment has been blamed for many things. Maybe it's partly responsible for the wildness I with animals.

Certainly there's nothing tame about some of their "human" neighbors. For downright cruelty, for instance, the most ferocious beast of the jungle cannot match the efforts of many a Hindu of the royal line. Anglo-Saxon villains are mere comic strip Desperate Desmonds in comparison with a Hindu prince who has made up his mind to set new records for malevolence.

Perhaps the most expert practitioner of the art of plain and fancy cruelty that I ever observed at close range was a Maharajah who ruled one of the native states of India. He was a man with a jaded palate. His normal mood was one of sullen boredom. He had made an extensive tour of Europe in search of new thrills and when these excitements ceased to excite he returned home to see what novelties in the way of mischief he could cook up there.

Jim Wendell, an Australian friend of mine who now lives in Calcutta, was in charge of the Maharajah's racing stable. Many of the Hindu princes are fond of horse racing and as the horses most available for this purpose are Australian arrivals, these royal gentlemen of India usually import Australian horsemen as supervisors.

GOADED INTO FURY

Wendell, hearing I was in the district on a collecting trip, invited me to attend a "show" that the Maharajah was giving the following day. As we sat and sipped our drinks at the local club my friend urged me not to miss the royal entertainment.

His Highness' "show" proved to be a battle between a tiger and a water buffalo in powerful bull. Bored with the humorous of palace routine, the prince sought a thrill in a combat between two animals that had no good reason for fighting each other.

Nothing was overlooked to insure a bloody battle. By royal command, the tiger had been given practically no food for two or three days—just enough to stave off weakness. To work up getting the buffalo good and mad he was made to go without water for some time. If there are any water buffaloes that have ever done anything to you and you want to annoy them just see that they don't get any water. You'll get quick results.

As an added guarantee of perfect buffalo fury, some small spikes had been driven into the animal's shoulders. Now, if there's anything a buffalo does not like it's a spike in his shoulder—or even an ordinary nail, or a mere thumbscrew, for that matter. The idea just doesn't appeal to him.

If you want to stage a murderous tussle, you can't do much better than bring together in a walled enclosure a ravenous tiger and a parched water buffalo that

RYDER SELECTS EAGLE 2-MILE RELAY TEAM

Donald Fiset, one of the finest track athletes at Boston College in recent years, added more laurels to his name when he broke the college record for the Heights' track in the half-mile. His time was one minute and 57 2-5 seconds.

This time was made in the trials for the two-mile relay team, which will represent Boston College at the intercollegiates in New York next Saturday night.

The other members of the team with Fiset are Capt. Jack O'Brien, Tommy Meagher and Brendon Moynahan. Robert Jordan, who was displaced by Fiset, will be the alternate.

Up until two weeks ago Fiset had been running quarters on the one-mile relay and had not done a half for over a year. But when it was decided that the one-mile team would not go to the intercollegiates Coach Ryder shifted him to the longer distance.

Ryder has also entered Tom Gillen, former football star and Immaculate Conception School champ, in the 1,000 yards. O'Brien has been doing fine times on the Heights' track and Ryder is confident that he will be able to place.

Best Boxers Meet in N. E. Title Bouts

The runners-up and winners in the St. Joe's T. A. Society's annual tour boxing show at Mechanics building on Saturday night will be picked to represent this section of New England in the New England boxing championships, which will be held on March 16. This will be the only opportunity Greater Boston boys will have of getting into the big tournament.

Boston School Ball Schedule Is Cut

Boston high school baseball teams may be limited to playing 15 games this spring, according to an order sent out by the director of physical education.

The reason is to give more time to track and field athletes by the coaches, in which a greater number of boys are interested.

Washington, March 3 (US) — Participation by the Army in the Olympic games to be held in Los Angeles, Calif., in 1932, is authorized in a bill passed by the House.

THIRD-PLACE RANGERS CLASH WITH BRUINS

CRUCIAL TILT FOR N. Y. SIX AT GARDEN

By BILL GRIMES

In their first appearance on Boston ice in 10 days, the Bruins will meet the New York Rangers tonight at the Boston Garden.

For the first time in more than a month, the Bruins will be at full strength. Dutch Gainor will be in the lineup, playing with his old side-kicks, Dit Clapper and Cooney Welland. The return of Gainor will round out the original Dynamite line, which has been a two-man unit most of the present season.

Although the Rangers have not won a game from the Bruins since late in 1928, they have not lost a game here this season. Manager Lester Patrick is confident that his charges will break through with a victory tonight. The Rangers are in the home stretch with but six games to play, three of which are listed for this week

Cook Brothers and Boucher Best Scorers in League

In Frank Boucher and the Cook brothers, the Rangers have the best scoring unit in the National Hockey League. The Cooks are doing most of the scoring, but Boucher is the play maker, having acquired a total of almost 20 assists this season.

Facing the Bruins, Canadiens and Toronto in a row, the Rangers are starting a week which will either break or make them. They are a game and a half out in front of the Detroit Falcons for third place but after they have played the Maple Leafs next Saturday night in Toronto, they will have played 41 games against 38 for the Adams crew.

In spite of the prowess of the Cook-Boucher-Cook line, the Rangers' second line has been a great asset this season. Paul Thompson, Butch Keeling and Murray Murdock have been responsible for the winning of their share of games for the Rangers this season.

More Wisdom for Mat Game

Morelli, Boston College Grid Star, Joins Ranks of Wrestlers

One by one the college football stars are lassoed by the wrestling moguls, Paul Bowser and Jack Curley. The latest collegian to be tossed on the mat is AL. MORELLI, herculean Boston College guard. There you see Al in football togs and as he will face Rex Smith in the Arena on Thursday night. The former Eagle lineman certainly is one tough looking wrestling hombre.

Corbett Sought as Opponent for Harvey

New York, March 3 (INS)—Young Corbett of Fresno, Cal., was sought today by Madison Square Garden to meet Len Harvey, the English fighter, here, on March 20. Corbett was offered the bout after Jackie Fields, former welterweight champion, withdrew from the assignment because of an injured hand.

Sonnenberg Meets McGill in New York

New York, March 3 (INS)—Gus Sonnenberg, who formerly claimed the world's heavyweight wrestling title, was signed today to meet Pat McGill of Ireland in a finish contest here March 11. This will mark the first appearance of the former Dartmouth wrestler here in more than two years.

Studies Sink Ruddy, Lion's Swim Star

New York, March 3 (INS)—Raymond Ruddy, world record holder and member of the last Olympic swimming team, has dropped out of Columbia University.

Ruddy competed for Columbia as a freshman in 1929 and during the 1930 winter term. In the term just ended he was barred from competition as a representative of Columbia because of failure to meet scholastic requirements.

Griffith Favored to Beat Levinsky

Chicago, March 3 (INS)—Tuffy Griffith, heavyweight challenger, who meets King Levinsky in a 10-round bout at the stadium Friday night, was quoted as a 7 to 5 favorite today to defeat the sensational ex-fish peddler

FANS GUARDED AGAINST FOUL FINISH

By JACK CONWAY

Tony Canzoneri, world's lightweight champion, and Sammy Fuller today agreed to wear the Taylor foul proof protector when they clash in their 10-round bout at the Boston Garden on Friday night.

This agreement assures the fans the winner will be decided by a knockout or decision.

The Taylor protector has been worn in New York since this edict went into effect and only one boxer has set up a claim of foul, which, of course, was not allowed.

Canzoneri arrived in town accompanied by Lou Fink, trainer, Fink is the capable citizen who conditioned Gene Tunney for his two winning battles with Jack Dempsey.

Jack Conway

It has been decided to have the boxers weigh in at 2 o'clock at the Garden on Friday. The mitt wielders will stage an innovation when each of them will talk over WBZA, following the weighing in ceremonies.

Wolfe and Piazza Collide in the Semifinal

Matchmaker Billy Ames has completed the preliminary card. It will consist of 26 rounds of milling.

Allie Wolfe and Odonne Piazza will mingle in the semifinal of seven rounds. Lad Abelin, Philippine Islands, will clash with Henry Janco, Lawrence, five rounds. Sammy Farber, West End, will oppose Pete Herman, Roxbury, five heats; Werner Arcelli, Italy, will take on Patsy Reno, Brockton, five rounds; Pat Munro, East Boston, will trade blows with Frank Herlihy, Lynn, four rounds.

Jack Sharkey Says He Weighs 202 Pounds

Sharkey intends to do light training two or three times each month so that he will be ready for action as soon as the heavyweight program adjusts itself.

The Schmeling-Stribling bout has not attracted a great deal of public interest, and it is felt the heavyweight program will be rearranged so that Sharkey will have a prominent part in it

Schaaf will get down to training again the latter part of this week, as he is booked to collide with Tommy Loughran in the New York Garden on March 13.

Two Teams Tie in N. Y. Bike Race

New York, March 3 (INS)—The fortieth hour of the annual international six-day bicycle race found the leaders still grouped at the head of the standings with four teams sharing the first two places. De Wet and Chartier and the Spencer-Hill combination were tied for the lead.

The standings:

Passing the Puck

Perk Galbraith is the all around man of the Bruins. He has been played on both wings and the defense this season. Incidentally, Mr. Galbraith is far more valuable to the Bruins than the average fan has any idea of, and he is highly rated around the Calder loop.

If Lester Patrick can get an even break this week, the New York Rangers are practically assured of third place in the American division, despite the fact that they will have only three games to play against six for the Falcons.

Speaking of Chicago brings to mind that after three or four seasons in the N. H. L., Maj. Frederick McLaughlin should realize that the president or the board of governors cannot overrule a referee on a question of judgment.

Bill Morton will be honored with the captaincy of the Dartmouth sextet for next season. Already a number of pro clubs have looked over Morton and he will have no trouble capitalizing on his hockey ability at the end of his college career.

On the basis of their playing in the Garden, Harvard will be on the short end next Saturday in New Haven. The Elis were so far superior to the Crimson in the first game that there was no comparison. In fact, Capt. Frank Luce's team is the best that ever represented Yale

It will be to advantage of the University Club to get down to serious training from now until after they have settled their difficulties with the Boston Hockey Club.

If the present plans go through there will be many new faces in the Bruin Cub lineup next season. The Bruins have a number of youngsters coming up who will be turned over to Manager Eddie Powers for development, and predictions are that the Cubs will be up in the midst of the fight for first place from the opening game.

MORENZ LEADS IN SCORING

Montreal, Que., March 3 (AP)—Howie Morenz, great centre-ice star of the Montreal Canadiens, has increased his lead over Ebbie Goodfellow of the Detroit Falcons in the race for scoring honors in the National Hockey League

Averages including games of last Sunday, credit Morenz with 46 points, compared to 41 for Goodfellow. Bill Cook of the New York Rangers is third with 39

Cook, incidentally, leads in goals with 28, and Joe Primeau, Leafs star in to assists with 28. Harvey Rockburn of Detroit still is the leading "bad man" with 112 minutes served in the cooler. Figures for the leaders follow:

Morenz, Montreal Canadiens	26	20	46
Goodfellow, Detroit	22	19	41
W. Cook, N. Y. Rangers	19	19	39

DON LAENHARDT AFTER JOB AT FIRST BASE

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 3 —Although the Boston Braves have several good rookie players among its long list, by far the most promising recruit is Don Laenhardt, an infielder from Chicago, who is making an effort in the practice workouts here to grab off a first baseman's job.

Laenhardt is 22 years old, weighs 185 pounds and stands 6 feet. He is built stocky and is fast and has plenty of power in his shoulders which gives him plenty of power.

His work in the infield has all the experts talking and "Bill McKechnie, the Braves manager, thinks that the boy is one of the best major league prospects he has seen at a spring training camp for many years.

"When did you first start playing ball?" Laenhardt was asked. "I have been playing ball on the sandlots of Chicago ever since I was four years old," was the reply of the Windy City kid. "I always wanted to be a major leaguer and I won't be satisfied until I am.

Laenhardt Played First on College Nine

"After I went through high school I entered St. Viator College at Kankakee, Ill., where I played first base for four seasons. Here is where I first started to take interest in baseball.

"My ambition has always been to have a smart pitcher like Herb Pennock pitch to me, and my ambition may be realized if McKechnie gives me a chance when the Braves clash with the Yanks in an exhibition game Saturday."

DENY A BREAK WITH ROCKNE

By GEORGE T. DAVIS

Los Angeles, March 3 (NS)—Athletic moguls of the University of Southern California had considerable to say today about a rumor that Coach Knute Rockne of the Notre Dame football team had gone east in a huff that boded ill for the Trojan-Irish gridiron relations after the present contract ends next fall at South Bend.

And all that was said was derogatory to the reliability of the rumor that Rockne was about to substitute the Golden Bears of California for the men of Troy as his far western traditional foe.

Willis O. Hunter, director of athletics, said:

"As far as the university of Southern California is concerned relationships with Notre Dame have been, and are on the most cordial and friendly grounds. We would regret very much if any publicity that has been issued in the past or may be forthcoming could jeopardize these relations."

When Coach Howard Jones was informed of this possible "break" he simply classed it as a wild rumor without any foundation.

The people who started such a story did so without any knowledge of conditions," he said

Yale Star Oarsman Out for Season

New Haven, Ct., March 3 (US)—Yale lost one of its most valuable varsity oarsmen, Edward Cox Brewster, No. 4, in the first varsity shell, because of an operation for appendicitis.

The operation was apparently completely successful, but Brewster is not likely to regain physical condition before the close of the rowing season

Quick Win Is Carnera's Only Hope

Miami, Fla., March 3—Miami air is heavy laden these days with assorted rumors regarding the Maloney-Carnera bout, scheduled for Thursday night and with the aroma of volatile liquids bottled in Cuba.

While officially, everyone connected with the Maloney-Carnera match insists that it will be held as advertised, there are rumors that it won't, or that if it is, it will be in the bag.

If Maloney can sidestep the manmountain for four or five rounds, it is likely that he will punch his way to victory and into the big money.

B.A.A. MARATHON ON APRIL 20

Another sign of spring drifted in today in the shape of the official announcement of the 35th annual Boston Athletic Association American Marathon run, which is scheduled for Monday, April 20

A special trophy will be awarded this year to the club whose first three athletes to finish score the smallest total number of points

Points are awarded with one for the winner, two for the second man, three for the third, and so on

The start of the race will be, as in the last few years, in Hopkinton,

REVERE BOY MAKES BOW THURSDAY

By RINGSIDE

Al Morelli of Revere, star Boston College football player who will not graduate until June, has turned pro and cast his lot with the wrestlers.

It was revealed today that Morelli has been training to be a wrestler for three months and that he will make his debut when he glances with Ben Smith, Michigan Wildcat, in a time limit match at Paul Bowser's show at the Arena on Thursday night.

Jake Patterson, former University of Syracuse star, will also be on the bill when Gus Sonnenberg and Leo Wyckoff battle it out Thursday night. He will have Frank Dellemano, Greek heavyweight, as an opponent.

Otto Hahnsen has been matched with Frank Yusko, Pat McKay, a newcomer to Boston, will tackle Jack Sherry, while John Spellman will have Axel Anderson as a rival.

"Sonny" Must Win or Pass Out of Picture

Sonnenberg has been working hard getting into condition for his meeting with Wykoff. The former champion realizes he has reached the turning point of his mat career. A defeat Thursday night will send the colorful Sonny on the way to oblivion, while a victory will enable him to continue his drive in the direction of a title shot with Ed George.

Wykoff scored a fall against Sonnenberg in their last meeting. Gus also had counted with a fall three for the third, and as on the start of the race will be, as in the last few years, in Hopkinton, Wykoff went skyrocketing through the ropes

THORPE WORKS FOR $4 A DAY

GREATEST OF ATHLETES IS IN POVERTY

Sports King In Trench

Los Angeles, March 3 (AP)—Jim Thorpe, acclaimed the greatest football player of all time and once holder of the title of world's best all-around athlete, is working here as a laborer with pick and shovel for $4 per day, but he still can grin.

The once mighty Indian of Carlisle, who in 1912 almost single-handed cornered Olympic honors for his native country only to relinquish his trophies later under charges of professionalism, is not ashamed of his job.

"I'm not through," he said today.

After work dim goes home to a very small cottage where Mrs. Thorpe, who also still can smile, and Grace, 6; Phillip 4, and Billy 2, wait for him. Sometimes at night Jim opens a big book and the little Thorpes look properly awed, as though understanding it all. The book contains many clippings and some photographs.

Photos Bring Back Days of Sports Glory

There's a picture of a bronze viking ship, which Jim got for winning the decathlon, and a picture of a bronze bust of Sweden's king, which went to Jim for winning the pentathlon.

"Guess it's an old story," he grins. "I liked to be a good fellow with the boys. But I'll come out of this. And I'll do some saving when I do."

Thorpe attended Carlisle Indian school from 1907 to 1912. He starred in football, baseball and track. Baseball he played in 1909 and 1910 at $25 a week in a little Southern league, brought about by rumors of his amazing feats at Stockholm in 1912.

In raising the flag of his native land to the top of the Olympic pole, Jim, after winning the five events of the decathlon took 8,000 points out of a possible 10,000 in the pentathlon's ten events, comprising the severest of all athletic tests.

He was named All-American back in 1911 and 1912. From 1913 to 1929 he played professional football baseball. He was with the New York Giants, Cincinnati Reds and Boston Braves in the National League. Then Canton Bulldogs, with Jim as halfback manager, were undefeated for five years, winning his gridiron career in 1929, a famous Indian became master ceremonies for the transcontinental bunion derby staged two years ago by C. C. Pyle. Then Jim retired from the sports picture. Odd jobs developed to his present toil.

Jim is dickering with two schools for the post of all-around coach. The schools are Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., where he won his fame, and Misalsippi A. & M. For sentimental reasons he prefers the former college.

"I'd feel better back there. In those meadows the pick and shovel will have to do."

Sox Rookies, Veterans Battle

Sox Rookies Battle Veterans for Jobs

By JOE CASHMAN

Pensacola, Fla., March 3—With the arrival of Infielders Bobby Reeves, Otis Miller and Hal Rhyne and Outfielders Tom Oliver and Earl Webb, the Red Sox squad is complete and the fight for regular jobs is on in earnest.

These five veterans weere allowed to report 10 days later than the rest of the squad because it was felt that they would have little trouble retaining their berths this season. But so well have some of their younger rivals shaped up that it appears now as though each of the quintet would have to hustle as never before to hold his job.

Of course, some of the rookies may not look so good and others may fold up when these regulars hit their stride. But from present indications none of the late arrivals will be able to clinch a place for several weeks to come and more than one are in danger of being benched.

Webb and Oliver won't have much to worry about for a while with Carr out on the injured list and Jack Wisnett and Al Vacanti being tried at first. Eventually, though, two of these three rookies are going to get in the race for a regular garden berth. Then the fun will start.

Rye Likely to Displace Oliver or Scarritt

It is our guess that Rye, if his injury doesn't rob him of his batting punch, will be a regular this season, replacing either Scarritt or Oliver. Webb, though not so good in the field as either of his running mates last year, is safe enough providing he hits like he did in 1930.

The three veteran infielders are going to run into the stiffest sort of opposition from the start with seven rivals who have been in training since February 21 waiting and anxious to make them look bad.

Reeves is to be tried at second base. All he will have to do to prove his worth is to show that he is better than Marvin Olson, Paddy Gordon and Al Marquardt.

Reeves Will Probably Keep His Place

Reeves may succeed but that either of the other two will is extremely doubtful to our way of thinking.

The late arrivals increase the size of the squad to 43 and all will work out with the morning squad which already numbers four more than the afternoon contingent.

He will do this until Thursday when he will send the boys through another nine-inning practice game to see how well they have learned their lessons.

17 "H" CREWS ON RIVER

Coaches Charles J. Whiteside of the Harvard varsity, Edward Brown of the class crews and Fred Smith of the 150-pounders, sent 17 Harvard crews out on the icy Charles river late yesterday afternoon for the first crew practice of the 1931 season.

Whiteside accompanied one of his varsity eights in the coxswain's seat, while the other coaches remained at the Newell boathouse as no coaching launches put out.

Four varsity boats, five class crews, and eight lightweight eights made up the flotilla which took a ripple paddle up as far as the Watertown sq. bridge and return.

The four varsity squad crews stroked by Gerard J. Cassedy, William Bacon, Augustus H. Parker, Jr., and John E. Lawrence, were boated as announced Monday except that in the Cassedy crew Coach Whiteside was coxswain while in Bacon's crew Everett L. lea suffered the added insult of spiked shoulders.

TIGER OPENS FIGHT

The combatants were turned loose from the cages. They didn't lose much time making plain how they felt about each other. The tiger opened with a leap designed to land him on the buffalo's shoulders. The buffalo shook him off, lowered his head and charged. The tiger eluded him and once again sprang for the enemy's shoulders. He landed, but couldn't keep his footing. Again he was shaken off, but this time he drew blood, his front claws digging into the back of his adversary's neck.

This didn't do much physical damage, but it did plenty by way of multiplying the fury of the buffalo. Again he charged and this time his aim was better. He caught the circling tiger amidships and sent him spinning on his back. The charges of a full-grown bull buffalo has spelled many an animal's doom. It is a charge that carries all before it. If the enraged animal, one of the most terrible of fighters when aroused, had been quick enough he could have ended the fight then and there with his horns. But he was too slow in his frantic attempt to gore the tiger down and gore him. More than one tiger has met his death in a fight with a buffalo that managed to sink in his terrible horns before the enemy had recovered from one of those awful charges.

BUFFALO'S NECK BROKEN

The tiger, partly pinned down, wriggled loose and poised himself. He leaped. In a fraction of a second he was hanging from the buffalo's left forequarter, his hind claws unshakably imbedded in the animal's withers, his forepaws securely sunk into the shoulders, while with his murderous teeth he dug deep into the back of the buffalo's neck. With an agonized bellow that was more of a sustained groan, the great jungle bull sank to his knees. Reaching out with his left forepaw, the great cat brought his claws around to the buffalo's head, and with a powerful thrust he cut down into the features, which became a sickening gory mass. As he dug deeper and deeper with those hideous claws he pulled the probing paw downward as though he were manipulating a giant glass-cutter, and then when a final dig into the blood-spattered head gave him a grip that could not be broken, he braced himself with the other forepaw and gave him a great yank toward himself that snapped the buffalo's neck.

The tiger continued to slash away at his fallen foe. He had conquered and was now ready to enjoy the fruits of victory. His sides were sore from the rough ing the great bull had given him and one paw was out of commission—(the left hind leg which had somehow snapped in the tussle and now hung loosely)—but the main consideration was that here was a feast after a long fast and hard fight.

BULLET'S AS FINALE

You will have to pardon my reference to the tiger's victory. I assumed, of course, that he had scored one. It seems that I was mistaken. As the hungry cat started the first course of his banquet a shot rang out, the first of a series.

These little leaden tributes, aimed at the tiger's head, found vulnerable resting places there and con the tiger was a mor- One of the Maharajah's guards who had been standing by during the fray, served as executioner.

It seems that the Maharajah no longer amused, found the limping tiger an eye-sore. An incapacitated tiger approximated his idea of a nuisance, and this one, having fulfilled his destiny by relieving a few pathmuts of their royal tedium, was ordered shot.

I caught a glimpse of the prince as he descended from the platform just outside the walled enclosure from which he had watched the spectacle. The puffiness of his features suggested a head made of putty and stained dark to give the proper Hindu look. In each of the sacs that depended from the lower eyelids you could have stuffed a hen's egg. The unpleasant curl of the dougy lips that contributed further to the general unpleasantness indicated that his princely highness was displeased.

The fight hadn't lasted long enough to suit him, I afterwards learned. After elaborate preparations, all he got for his trouble was a brief skirmish. It was galling. No wonder he had the tiger shot, poor man. Hadn't the silly beast wound up the fight in a hurry instead of dragging it out endlessly and showing his bored chieftain a good time? A tiger was lacking in consideration at that deserved what he got.

I looked around for Lal Bahadur, my native boy-of-all-jobs, and prepared to leave. I was more conservative than the rest of us who had watched the battle from the wall of the enclosure, had perched himself among the beautiful red blossoms of a nearby plane tree. Lal scrambled to the ground and ran toward me excitedly emitting as whole-souled an ejibet as ever greet my ears.

In this quaint and playful manner, Lal was merely expressing his opinion of the entertainment had just witnessed. In his brain were lingered an echo of something he had once heard his wicked master say (yes, I have men to answer for):

Lal spoke broken English, in a typical native sing-song. He had a habit of running his words together, into a jumble of syllables, sometimes unrecognizable.

WHY LAL OBJECTED

Just as I was about to credit Lal with humanitarian instincts, he unleased a hodge-podge of words that made it clear what was bothering him. What he regarded an outrage was not the killing of the tiger, but the fact that the beast had not been permitted to eat a square meal before he was sent to his doom.

Lal was tantalized by the idea of man or beast needlessly dying with an empty stomach. We discussed the subject at great length.

I tried to make Lal see that the question involved was not whether the tiger should have been permitted to have a final meal, but whether it was according to make an animal fight for his life in combat with a dangerous opponent and then when he had won, shoot him down in cold blood merely for the fun of seeing him expire.

I simply could not get my idea through Lal's head. He was a comparatively kind-hearted Hindu, which means that, while not nearly so blood-thirsty as native royalty, he was not exactly merciful in his attitude toward wild animals, regardless of the circumstances. Had he understood what I meant by the sporting attitude he would have dismissed it as foolish sentimentality. Why should anyone want to let a tiger, world-enemy of man, live? But it would have been of no use to let him have a last meal of buffalo meat before bumping him off. Over and over again he made his point, underscoring it each time with an eloquent curse.

BELLE OF LYNN IN LOVE TRIANGLE

A Reporter's Story of a Famous Love Affair That Ended in Death

CAPT. HAINS THE ELDER HAINS

MURDER WILL OUT!

MRS. ANNIS

PRISON GATES OPENED FOR SLAYER

"My God! Can I never get away from that hated name!" These are the words of Capt. Peter C. Hains, when he met Mrs. William. E. Annis, at a Bayside, L. I., yacht club. The meeting of Mrs. Annis seemed to fire Capt. Hains' brain, for it was the husband of this woman, William E. Annis, a magazine publisher, whom Hains claimed ruined his home. A few minutes later Hains had shot Annis. Capt. Hains was sent to Sing Sing. He is shown here with his father leaving the New York prison after he was pardoned. (International Newsreel photo.)

By DAN W. GALLAGHER

Years slip by. Tragedies and persons figuring in them are forgotten by the general public. The case of Claudia Libby may be cited as an example. Reared at Lynn, deemed its reigning belle in the long ago, she played a leading part in one of the most sensational murders ever perpetrated in this country.

Claudia was the grandchild of Jeremiah Libby, one of Lynn's wealthiest residents. The family home was at Washington and Lyman sts. in that North Shore city. Upon reaching womanhood she became the bride of Capt. Peter C. Hains, Jr., U. S. Army.

On August 15, 1928, the country was startled with the news that Hains, in a fit of jealousy, had shot and killed William E. Annis, prominent yachtsman and clubman, on the boat landing of the Bayside Yacht Club at Bayside, Long Island, N. Y.

CAPTAIN CONVICTED

Hains was arrested on the spot, together with his brother, Thornton Hains, writer of sea stories. Both were charged with first degree murder. Thornton's trial took place early in 1929. His acquittal followed. Capt. Hains' trial opened in April that same year before Judge Garrett W. Garretson and a jury. He was convicted of manslaughter in the first degree and was sentenced to not less than eight and not more than 16 years in Sing Sing prison. After serving nearly ve years, he was pardoned by Governor John A. Dix.

I had a lengthy talk with Capt. Hains in New York City, following his release from prison. It had been brought out at his brother's trial and at his own that he had shot Annis, a married man, because he was jealous of him. It was proved that the wife he trusted and the man he regarded as his best friend had been lovers for years and that his mate—the former Lynn belle—had signed a statement to this effect.

"Now, for the first time, he was to break his silence and let him have his say. He had shot and killed Annis on that yacht club float. Being acquainted with the details of his trial, I was attending it daily, though I did not cover the trial of his brother. I asked him why he did not take the witness stand in his own behalf. His reply was:

"I wished to testify. However, such matters are not decided by one's self. You cannot undertake to direct your lawyers when you yourself are unfamiliar with law. Such matters are decided by them without reference to your personal desires. You cannot dictate to them their line of action. They decided that I was not in a condition of mind at the time to testify coherently. One cannot expect a sick man to be his own doctor.

"I killed Annis because he won the love of my wife while I was in the Philippines, had taken advantage of my absence to wreck my home. The fact that I was finally wrung from her lips. And in the rebound of fury I met and shot him to death, as he deserved. On the day that I killed him, my brother Thornton had persuaded me to go out with him in his motorboat in the hope of distracting my mind from my troubles. Later in the day, we went over to Bayside to look at some property there. Thornton was thinking of buying a home. It was on a Saturday afternoon and we were told we would probably find the real estate dealer at the yacht club.

MEETS ANNIS

"While my brother was in the clubhouse inquiring about the agent, I came face to face with Mrs. Annis, wife of the man who had ruined my home. She passed me without a sign of recognition. 'My God!' I thought, 'can I never get away from that hated name?' I turned and wandered toward the boat landing. I watched the yachts as they came up to the boat landing. One stood close in. Then someone mentioned the name of Annis. My brother had followed me. 'Come away, Pete,' he said, 'Annis is in that boat—the Reliance.' I failed to heed his words. I was rooted to the spot. Must I flee like a coward from this man's presence? Must I run away from the one who had wrecked my life? Everything went red before me. Let him come, I will face him.

"My brother grasped my arm. 'Come, Pete,' he said. I shook him off. That boat had arrived at the dock. I saw Annis and he saw me. A faint smile curled his lip. It's his same old cynical smile. I had seen it often before. It was a devilish smile—a maddening smile. Everything went red again. Gone are all the bystanders, my brother, the boatmen; nothing but red, and then that mad rush, that whirl of shots and shouts and cries. You may not believe it, but I have no recollection of shooting him. Yet I heard the shots that killed him. Presently I came to myself and I saw people running frantically to and fro. My brother grasps my arm. 'Stand back—stand back!' he shouts. 'I will arrest this man—he is my brother.' Thornton leads me to an upturned boat that is lying on the float. We seat ourselves upon it. Then some people approach. My brother has a pistol in his hand. And they tell back.

"By and by there is a commotion. A policeman has arrived. He speaks to several people, then approaches and grasps me by the arm. He tells me I must go with him. We get in an automobile and ride. Thornton is with us. We are taken to the jail and put in a cell—my brother and myself. Then he tells me I have killed Annis. And he explains that he, too, has been arrested and charged with murder. I say to him: 'It's monstrous to hold you for this'. A whole army could not have saved that man. The sight of him was too much—and I let him have it.'

BROTHER ACQUITTED

"Well, Thornton is tried and acquitted. Three hundred and sixty prisoners in that jail cheered when they heard a jury had acquitted him. Then came my trial. I was sent to Sing Sing. They put me to work in the match shop there. I found many prisoners eyed me curiously. Every time, every class was there. Oh, I longed for a sight of the sun. Even now I can bask in it. After a while, I was transferred to the tinshop where conditions were better. I now began to understand prison life. My release came suddenly and with little previous knowledge.

"I walked forth a free man. I had served approximately five years. Dead are the ambitions, the hopes, the resolves of yesterday. And now, for me, the dead past shall bury its dead. A great peace steals over me. Gone are the fierce fires of passion, the deadly bitter thoughts. As for Claudia, I shall strive to forget her. When she confessed to my father, and still later to my attorneys—before having it put in writing and alsnkep the document as was revealed at the trial—that she disliked me, my love for her died and sealed the door that scoundrel. When I sued for divorce and named him, and he induced me to withdraw the bill against me because he feared he would be injured in his business, that was the last straw.

Mrs. Annis, widow of the slain yachtsman and the innocent sufferer in the tragedy mentioned, took to vaudeville immediately following the crime in order to support herself. She put in at least one season on the circuit singing "The Rosary."

TOMORROW: First installment of the famous Rogers' murder case.

THE SECRET SIX

Drinks were passed—to all but Scorpio, who, as usual, drank his milk.

"Speech! Speech!" shouted one of the gangsters, and others took up the cry.

He hesitated.

Newton flashed him a glance that said plainly as words—"On your feet. Hands on the reins!"

Scorpio rose, and looked about the room.

"By the Neck!"

"This here is a great honor—and one you guys will never regret," he began. The sound of his own voice, and the silent attention of the mob encouraged him. He swelled with pride that adulation can give. He expanded almost visibly.

"I've got great plans for you," he announced ponderously. "Plans that are going to take us on the up and up! They're going to make fortunes for us!"

"Thousands—no—millions! If you've got the guts—there ain't nothin' to stop us!"

The gang applauded.

"By the time the November elections come around," Scorpio continued, rembering Newton's coaching of the past few days, "we'll be such a power in this dump that we'll have it by the neck. Yes—by the neck!"

A noise at the door drew his eyes away from his auditors.

Scorpio's face glowed with a smile— "as I was sayin', pals—when me and you—" Peaches closed the door and vanished. "Yeah, as I was sayin'—" But his voice died away as he followed Peaches out of the room into the dark shadows of Johnny Franks' old office.

Several men were killed by the bodyguard thrown about Scorpio.

The Scorpio gang struck back, hijacked Colimo's launches and left several Colimo men dead in the river.

Merchants in the city began to pay tribute to two sets of racketeers as Colimo and Scorpio both levied upon them. Colimo's racketeers tried, in turn, to "muscle in" on Centro.

The police confessed themselves powerless.

Such was the situation when Markham called together the six men he had banded in his plan for a crusade.

They met in the top floor of a great office building, in a secret headquarters, especially designed. There was one entrance, from a private elevator built to run into a locked office two floors below. With them was Donlan.

"The chief of police," stated Markham, "can't handle the situation. I know he's been taking money. We have to have a man we know—and can trust. Donlan—will you take leave of absence from the government, and take the job?"

Donlan nodded.

"We'll put the jam on the city council tomorrow, and get the appointment through before the gangsters know it," stated Markham.

No More 'Gouger'

Almost at the same time, another meeting was being held. This one was in Scorpio's office in Centro. Now, fully established as the ruler of the gang, he conferred with Newton, the Gouger, and their lieutenants.

"We have to get a grip on this town now," Newton tersely stated, "and that means we've got to get ready for the November elections."

"From now on, call the Gouger Mr. Nick Misoski—never let 'Gouger' be heard again. We'll spread around that he was a cowboy from the West, a sturdy Westerner who came here to earn an honest living in the packing houses; how he is a leader of the laboring men in their fight for better conditions, and all that sort of thing."

"What the Hell!" demanded the Gouger.

"We're going to elect you Mayor of Centro!"

The Gouger never knew exactly what was happening to him in the hectic months that followed Scorpio's announcement that he was to be the next mayor of Centro. He obeyed, unhesitatingly, of course, when he was costumed for the part with a broad Stetson hat and a pair of Western boots—and even managed to try to talk with a Western dialect. Scorpio and Newton didn't pay much attention to him—they were too busy organizing, holding secret conferences and organizing some more.

Organization was comparatively simple, citizens who espoused the cause of John W. Carson, the reform candidate, a stationery merchant who had promised to "clean up" Centro, were conferred with—usually on dark nights—by a moral suasion committee from the Scorpio gang. And when they woke up in the Emergency Hospital they weren't so active politically, as a rule. The Centro police could do nothing—or, at least, so they told the protesting reformers. Banners, proclaiming "Honest Nick" Misoski as "The People's Choice," floated to the winds from many buildings in Centro. Bands blared. Radio sent forth a raucous call to arms to the voters to support the Western Moses come to lead Centro out of a political wilderness.

Newton Guides

Scorpio had enlarged the old Johnny Franks restaurant to accommodate his campaign headquarters, hangout for lieutenants, political satellites and gangsters, and from here he handled his forces, under Newton's astute guidance.

Two days before election, the opposing factions were at the height of their battle. The reform element had rolled up a strong "silent vote" that the Scorpio gang knew was there, but could not definitely locate. That night they held a council of war. Peaches hovered about Scorpio, to his intense annoyance, as he and his lieutenants "sized up" the situation.

"Just what do you think our chances are," Scorpio demanded of Newton, as reports from the different workers were digested.

"Not bad," replied Newton. "You have tremendous odds against you, of course. The business men and the newspapers are supporting the opposition, even though we have the business men afraid to make too much noise. There's that silent vote I talked about—you can't really gauge or trace it. But we have more money and know mob psychology better than they do. Our hope lies with the masses."

Mr. Robert Evans, 34 Jefferson Ave., Chelsea, Mass., Says:—"I just came in to tell you that I am sending another patient to you. Every time I see or hear of anyone with skin disease I send them to you. I certainly am grateful for what you have done for me. I had suffered with Eczema since 1912. It was all over my face and hands and gave me no peace. It seemed to me I had been to every doctor and hospital in Boston but could get no relief from them. I heard of you from a customer of mine, who recommended you strongly. Like a drowning man grasping at a straw I had you treat me and I am well again. I will be glad to have you publish this statement as it may lead others to relief from their suffering." Signed ROBERT EVANS.

The Judges' Gowns

The Reason They Are Worn

There is a reason for the gown worn by the judges in most of our states.

It is not that the gown is considered becoming nor that its use by judges is of ancient origin. The reason lies deeper.

The gown is a symbol of the judicial office and denotes that its wearer, as a minister of justice, is set apart from his fellow men. It is not altogether dissimilar, in its significations, although in nothing like the same degree, to the robe worn by the members of a monastic order to indicate withdrawal from the common ways and familiar haunts of men.

It is the duty of a judge to maintain a certain aloofness in his contacts with his community; not that he should be chilling and repellent in his manner, but he should be observant at all times of the peculiar and decisive relations that he may, at any moment, find himself sustaining to the affairs and to the members of his community. It should not become the general impression that the practice of law, as was said by an eminent member of the New York bar, "is a matter not of knowing the law, but of knowing the judge."

The American Bar Association, in its canons of judicial and professional ethics, puts the question squarely—"A judge should not suffer his conduct to justify an impression that any person can improperly influence him or unduly enjoy his favor." And a reciprocal duty is put upon the lawyers to observe a salutary reserve in their approaches to the judges—"marked attention and unusual hospitality on the part of a lawyer to a judge, subject both the judge and the lawyer to misconstruction of motives, and should be avoided."

Quite in line with these sound views of judicial propriety is the new legislation asked for by Governor Roosevelt of New York, prohibiting a judge from serving as an officer or director of any banking or business corporation.

To any man worthy of occupying a judicial office such a prohibition should be unnecessary. It has been disclosed, however, in recent investigations, that some members of the judiciary are inclined to draw a rather fine distinction between a degree of business activity which is permissible and that which is not, overlooking entirely the fact that the question of judicial propriety does not turn upon the extent of the impropriety.

The prohibition of business activity on the part of a judge, asked in Governor Roosevelt's message, is neither so sweeping nor so comprehensive as we should like to see it, but it is a step—and not an inconsiderable step—in the right direction.

It should be embodied promptly in suitable legislation.

Corsets Come Back

Smelling Salts, Too

From Paris comes the information, more interesting than the Franco-British naval parleys, that Summer tan will be unfashionable this year. Women, it is announced, are tired of looking like he-men. They want to be listless, pale, feminine—the way their grandmothers were. Purveyors of facial bleaches are preparing to do a big business this season.

It may be so. There is no accounting for fashion—nor, one is tempted to add, for women. But it is an ill wind that blows nobody good. If the early Victorian type is coming in again somebody will profit by it. The makers of corsets, crinoline and smelling salts may be able to declare dividends again. They have gone through some lean years, while the ladies specialized in the strenuous outdoor life. Maybe it is their turn now.

All Quiet

Along the Home Front

Brief news item from Norwalk, Ct.:

"Oscar Johnson, 37, World War hero, perished here from hunger and exposure because he was too proud to beg aid. A baker and a garage mechanic by trade he had been out of work for six months. Weak from lack of nourishment he crawled into a coal yard barn, where he was found unconscious. He never rallied."

Johnson had won the Distinguished Service Cross, the Croix de Guerre and citations from the British and Belgian governments. He was then a private with Company B, 60th Infantry, 5th Division, A. E. F. On October 14, 1918, he rushed a group of advancing Germans and rescued his platoon commander, Lieutenant Louis Clarkson, who had fallen badly wounded.

The dispatch adds that flags are at half-staff in Norwalk, which would interest Johnson if he knew it.

Marriage Bonds

A MAN begins to look interesting to the gold diggers just about the time he gets so fat or so bald that his wife secretly wonders what she ever saw about him to make her think him romantic.

* * *

* * *

The woman who sues for $100,000 for the alienation of a philandering husband's affections should be arrested for profiteering.

* * *

The borrowing habit has become so flagrant that you have to watch your interesting or good-looking husband as carefully as you do your interesting books or your good umbrella.

One test of a man's character appears to be his reaction to a high silk hat—whether it makes him feel dashing, important, foolish or just irresistible.

A SOUND DECISION

The Senate acted wisely in confirming the appointment of Eugene Meyer, Jr., to the Federal Reserve Board.

(See the special article by M. S. Rukeyser, "The Crime of Being Wealthy," at right.)

"EVERYTHING IS 'JAKE' Now," SAYS HE

It's always the darkest just before the dawn, Dear Readers, and do not be discouraged. The Central figure of Mr. Opper's cartoon, like everyone else, may be mistaken.

The few grafting policemen will be eliminated from the ranks of "The Finest," the few members of the judiciary who contaminate the bench and soil the ermine they wear will be ousted, those public officials aligned with criminals and fattening off the profits of crime syndicates will be removed from public life—SOME DAY.

HASTEN THE DAY!

New York Day by Day

Park Avenue Still Classy

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, March 3—Park avenue of all New York streets has made greatest progress during the past ten years. A high-powered association fights encroachment of business, vulgar display of electric signs, 5 and 10 cent fronts and other commercialisms costing Fifth avenue a place in the sun. Yet many say in 15 years Park will go the way of Fifth unless vigilance is strict. Beglamoured by its own achievements, a street often becomes careless. Already stage comics speak of Park as a rincon where "bad ladies walk good dogs." A half dozen huge hotels now dot the street.

The association is striving to keep theaters out of the boundary. A huge cinema cathedral is seeking location there—dangling aloft a pot of gold. If bars are let down in this instance other amusement ventures are bound to creep in. And Park will become declassg.

There are no street cars on Park, but there is a faint rattle from the trains that thunder into Grand Central. Among the 5000 wealthy families who reside on the thoroughfare between 34th and 90th, there are reputed at least 1500 millionaires.

No rents in the city are so high, ranging from $7000 a year to $50,000. Many buildings are co-operative and apartments sell from $60,000 low to $250,000 high. Buyers must be O. K'd by a meticulously-minded board of directors.

* * *

Restrictions along the Gold Coast are often racial. A prospect must have his record scrutinized from cradle to now. Its pretensions are symbolized by one hotel offering a bedroom with a Rembrandt and for which a $30 a day extra charge is made.

Along this polished promenade live three German princes, two grand dukes and several barons. Park avenue zooms along for more than 40 blocks with a Mayfair grandeur and ends abruptly with a plop of a falling rocket in a Ghetto pushcart rabble.

One of the oldest and best of the Lamb's stories concern Wilton Lackaye in a darkened corner, probably dreaming of Trilby triumphs. A young Lamb gambols in—one tagged for lasting courage in a sea disaster where women and children rightfully deserved first place in life boats. He skipped over to Lackaye.

"How about billiards, Mr. Lackaye?"

"Don't care to play billiards."

"Checkers then?"

"No checkers tonight."

"How would a little two-handed pinochle hit you?"

"I don't care to play anything with you."

Recently I had a closeup of one of those frequent cafe holdups. My table was near the cashier. A youth came in, his face the sickly white of a shark's belly. When the crowd thinned, he stepped up to the cashier and said nervously: "Hand it over quick!" In a flash it was done, the revolving door twirled and the thief vanished. And I immediately lost all interest in a grand 20 cent cut of lemon meringue pie.

There is a faucet in the kitchen that when turned to a certain point billows like a trumpeting elephant. The plumber tinkered with it today and now it gives forth shrill musical notes. It wouldn't surprise me if when they turn it on tomorrow it produces a group of Tiller Girls. Or maybe Paul Ash.

Last night I spotted a gentleman in front of me who looked like Ashton Stevens, the Chicago critic—spats and all. Catching up, I slapped his shoulder and cried: "Hello, Ashton!" He looked me over and said curtly: "My name is Ertwhistle!" Then he blustered away. And I went on feeling after all, life is worth while. One doesn't meet an Ertwhistle every day!

Listen, World! -:- By Elsie Robinson

Can't Get God for Nothing

EACH MAN has a God.

And each man's God is as big as the man's own vision and desire.

A black pigmy in the African jungle makes a bundle of straw and sticks and calls it God. It is a small bundle and it is a small God. But it fits the pigmy's vision and desire. He does not see God or life in the large. He comprehends nothing of its beauty and wonder and tremendous power. Life, to him, is a good tree to climb, a safe cove to hide a dangerous swamp to ford. Sunsets are wasted on him. And if his stomach is full, he should worry about his soul! Food, a warm bed, safety, enemies and wild beasts—that is all. His bundle of sticks and straw is a very accurate measure of his spiritual need. He wouldn't know what to do with a more subtle or magnificent God.

But the God of a great poet or prophet looms taller than the stars—

Each man's God is as big as that man's own vision and need.

What do you really want out of life? What are you honestly interested in? There's the size of your God.

MOST OF US CAN FIND ALL THE GOD WE WANT IN ANY GOOD DEPARTMENT STORE.

But, just catch us admitting that fact! With our last gasp we will protest that we require all the God there is, and then some!

There is, of course, a God beyond our petty imagining—the Source of all life—the Alpha and Omega—

But He isn't YOUR GOD, nor MINE—

Only as much of Him as we can understand and earn is your God and mine. And comprehending is a hard job—

Elsie Robinson

YOU DON'T GET GOD FOR NOTHING.

You can't get God merely by joining a church, by learning a creed, by reading books or obeying laws or going around with nice people. You can get God only by living Him.

No one possesses more than an infinitesimal part of God.

You can only have as much of God as you can imagine and need and work for and use. And all the rest of His Wonder and Beauty and Power are useless to you. They do not exist for you. They do not exist for you any more than Einstein's calculations exist. YOU "NO CAN DO."

That is why it is futile to try to force your God on anyone else. Your concept of God, however excellent, won't do him a bit of good, for each man must discover God in his own way and in his own time.

If you are really interested in God, there is just one way—

The Crime of Being Wealthy

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser

SENATOR SMITH W. BROOKHART, in unsuccessfully opposing confirmation by the Senate of the appointment of Eugene Meyer, Jr., as Governor of the Federal Reserve Board, has again raised the issue of whether it is a crime to possess a million dollars.

This is an extraordinary dictum to come from the mouth of a member of the Upper House of Congress, which in theory is supposed to be composed of wise men.

They do not object to criticism of the methods by which aggregations of capital were attained.

President Harding followed the example of his predecessor in calling the second richest man in the country to the Treasury post. Secretary Mellon has vindicated the confidence which was reposed in him.

We do not advocate for purposes of efficient government an oligarchy of millionaires.

On the other hand, the country will deprive itself of excellent and highly competent public servants if it adopts the Brookhart standard of excluding from office all men who succeeded conspicuously in private competitive activity.

It confirmed Mr. Meyer and thus gave the country the benefit of the services of an extremely intelligent individual who has proved that he understands the practical subtleties of finance.

Sparrow Would Be Eagle

By WINIFRED BLACK

Words Don't Hide Inferiority

"I'M AS GOOD as you are," shouted the Queer Little Man with the bitter eyes and the twisted, set grimace.

"I'm as good as you are, I'll have you know."

"Uh, huh!" said the Quiet Person, with an indulgent smile. "Of course, you are a good man; of course, you are; and just a bit better, I presume, if the truth were known."

Winifred Black

The Queer Little Man stared.

He gave a sarcastic snort.

"Don't try any of your highbrow stunts on me," he said. "I'm on to you; don't forget that."

"Dear, dear," said the Quiet Person. "That's really a pity, isn't it? I thought I had you completely fooled."

The Queer Little Man turned white with rage, he tried to speak, choked, stammered, snatched up his hat, and was gone.

"Poor little man," said the Quiet Person, "he's really suffering from an inferiority complex. All people who say they are as good as you are really know they are not as good as you are and it makes them nervous and so they talk like that. Poor things, if they'd just make up their minds that nobody is wasting much time thinking about them at all, or caring whether they are as 'good as or as bad as' somebody else, they might be happy and contented in a quiet sort of way."

"Sparrows have their place in the world, and it must be, in its way, rather a comfortable, busy, cheerful sort of place, too, but if they should suddenly insist that they are eagles would it not complicate things, wouldn't it?"

And the Quiet Person hummed an odd little song about "Me and my wife, and me and my work" that was really rather a catchy little affair.

Now I had been rather cross with the funny little man and his twisted face and bitter eyes made me dislike him. But when I took to thinking about him—of course, I didn't like him any better, but I did feel sorry for him.

How terrible it must be to go through life thinking that people are looking down on you when they ought to be looking up. And especially it must be terrible when you know in your secret heart that there really is something all wrong with you somewhere.

Maybe you are not tall enough to suit yourself.

Or maybe you are blonde when you want to be dark, or stout when you wish you were thin. Perhaps you are ignorant and have not the brain to learn what other people know, and so you hate them for knowing it.

Perhaps you are mean, grudging and stingy, and want people to think that you are generous and open-hearted.

Perhaps you are sly and scheming and deceitful, and you wish you had the courage to be honest and frank and open-hearted.

It's all rather a sad business, is it not?

If I felt like that, I'd be very careful never to say: "I'm as good as he is," because I should be afraid that everyone would guess the uncomfortable truth.

The Old Men Drank Jake
Muscle Shoals Veto
The Power of Russia
How Was Thought Created

By Arthur Brisbane

HODGE, Cal., March 4—Just west of here, at the edge of the beautiful Pacific ocean, Uncle Sam has a reservation where old soldiers, dating back to the Civil War, spend their last days, sitting on benches in the warm sunshine, watching automobiles rushing by with loads of beautiful movie queens, on their way to Santa Monica beach.

As every good prohibitionist knows, that ought to satisfy the aged warriors, but it does not satisfy all. Before prohibition, some would occasionally spend five of their pennies for a glass of beer, no matter what that might mean to their future happiness. Under prohibition, some have accepted substitutes that bootlegging supplies.

Twenty-four of the old soldiers are today lying in agony in the Sawtelle Hospital, their muscles rigid, all of them close to death. They drank a deadly brand of alcoholic ginger called "jake" and will pay with their lives for their failure to respect the Eighteenth Amendment. Perhaps, getting the "jake" at drug stores, made it seem less wicked to them.

Concerning alcohol, the law makes an exception in favor of Protestant, Catholic, Jewish and other clergymen, those that possess the power to change the alcohol into the Precious Blood, and those that do not claim such power. Would it be a good idea to except also any soldiers past 70 that shed their blood for their country, since that is also precious blood?

President Hoover has vetoed the Muscle Shoals bill and the Senate has sustained that veto. The public investment of a hundred and fifty millions will continue to remain idle and wasted. Farmers could get cheap fertilizers from that plant. But that would not suit the fertilizer companies. Manufacturers and householders could get cheap electricity from that public investment, but that would not suit the power companies.

And even the weanling child should know that those companies and a few others are our actual government. That is not a complaint, only a statement of fact. It is probably desirable, on the whole, that intelligent feudal industry should govern, until the people develop signs of intelligent thinking, plus will power.

A powerful French radical complains that France spends too much, keeping ready for war. Briand, a real statesman, replies for the French government, that the Russian army is today the most formidable destructive power in the world, and he does not intend to have France taken by surprise.

Our government could learn from Briand, if it could learn from anyone. But it cannot, it is too busy with the beer question. Why worry about Russia, or the next war, when you know that even now someone in America may be drinking a glass of beer.

France, as all the world knows, is the best prepared among the nations. A British statesman says, "We are polite to the French, because we know that their overwhelmingly powerful air fleet could destroy every city in Britain, on the day that war might be declared."

With all this preparation, France is marvellously prosperous. Her store of gold is next to ours. Per capita, size and population compared, it is much greater than ours, and France, until within a few weeks, had been absolutely free of unemployment.

It pays to be prepared. And some day, our financiers, underrating Russia, and directing their government to snub and ignore Russia's government, may wish they had been wiser.

Prof. Einstein will be interested in his talk with Dr. Crile, about the latter's experiments in "artificial production of life by means of physics and chemistry." Like other scientists, Prof. Einstein finds it necessary to explain in some material way the origin of life in the universe. He and they are not satisfied with the account of a Supreme Being, saying "let us make man in our image, after our likeness," as told in the first chapter of Genesis, then making a full-grown man out of dust or clay.

Science may name the elements essential to life, and apparently produce life from suitable protoplasm and chemicals. But life of itself is no more important than steam, or capillary attraction. THOUGHT is the only thing of real importance.

GOSSIP FALSE, HAMMER BOY SAYS

HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS DAMAGE IN BIG STORM

Miles of B. & M. Under Water; the Highest Tide in 21 Years Wrecks Houses

More Storm Pictures on Page One Second Section

A surging, pounding surf, borne on the highest tide in 21 years and driven by a northeast snowstorm, ravaged the coast today, causing hundreds of thousands of dollars damage.

Shooting spray 50 feet into air, the surf battered the shore, isolating several communities, disrupting train service and shipping, wrecking cottages and flooding cellars and streets.

Hull, Nahant, Squantum, Point Shirley and Roughan's Point were cut off by the waves, train service to Winthrop and Lynn was discontinued and boats were resorted to in a number of places.

From the South Shore to the New Hampshire coast tremendous surf swept over seawalls and inundated low-lying communities, tieing up traffic, and in numerous instances wrecking summer cottages.

B. & M. UNDER WATER

At Portsmouth, N. H., the Boston & Maine railroad reported miles of tracks between Hampton and Hampton Falls under water, there was water in the railroad's tunnel in Salem, and trouble was experienced in Beverly, Chelsea and Everett.

New Haven trains were tied up when water rose over the tracks in the South station terminal on Fort Point channel.

Boats were pressed into service when water rose over the wharves in Atlantic ave., and residents of Beachmont, Orient Heights and Harbor View used them to evacuate their houses.

TOWERING SURF BREAKS OVER WINTHROP

Crashing billows and towering surf are not new spectacles in Winthrop, but today's storm swept in the highest tide seen in 21 years and kicked up a surf that even the oldest inhabitant has never seen equalled. This spot on Winthrop beach, between Ocean ave. and Sturgis st., was a scene beautiful and terrifying to behold. Thousands of tons of water, broken into fine spray, were hurled high into the air as each giant comber rolled in. (Staff photo.)

YOUTH WILL FACE VICTIM IN COURT IF SHE LIVES

Doctors See Hope for Haverhill Widow; the Defense May Change Plans

Haverhill, March 4—Police announced today that it appears $75 was stolen from Mrs. Ellis the night she was attacked. She drew $200 from a bank Friday, it was stated, and spent not more than $125 for parties and other expenses.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Haverhill, March 4—From his cell 17-year-old Russell Noble today sent to his townspeople an emphatic denial of "poison gossip" linked with the hammer attack case, in which he is accused of assault with intent to kill Mrs. Clara E. Ellis.

Speaking through his brothers, to whom he entrusted the message, the boy branded all the gossip as "lies."

His brothers, frequent visitors to the county jail at Lawrence, where young Noble is held on $51,000 bail, said that gossip about the case was causing him pain, and he wanted to make it clear he did not start the story.

Important developments today in the case indicated a revamping of the plan of campaign to save the curly-haired boy from the consequences of his alleged sudden switch from "saint to sinner."

WIDOW TO TESTIFY

Coupled with improvement in the condition of Mrs. Ellis, in the midst of her two-day ordeal, came a statement that she positively will testify against the boy if she lives.

This statement was by Mrs. George Kimball Clement, sister-in-law of the wealthy widow, who made it to set at rest persistent rumors to the contrary.

Mrs. Clement classed these rumors with other "poison gossip" about the case, in which considerable mystery still lurks, in spite of continued energetic investigation by the authorities.

"The rumors are beastly; nobody knows her better than I do, and I say she will disprove them by testifying against the boy," said Mrs. Clement.

Physicians said if she recovers she will probably have to wear a silver plate in her skull, as it is

PASTOR SEEKS $200,000 BALM

For the lost love of his wife, whose suit for divorce resumes on Monday, John J. Callan, retired Wellesley pastor, today sued his wife's sister and her father-in-law for $200,000.

Charging alienation of the affections of his wife, Mary Himenway Callen, niece of Bishop Lawrence, Callan named Mrs. Henry Richard of New York and Mrs. Natalie Hemenway in two $100,000 actions.

Council Rejects 3 Ely Men

The Governor's Council today, for the first time in many years, rejected three appointments made by a Governor for unpaid trusteeships —and the Council also held up a fourth appointment.

Governor Ely's appointments were for all Democrats to replace Republicans now holding the posts.

With only one member of the Council a Democrat, there were, nevertheless, two favoring votes on the three appointments rejected and four favoring votes on the third.

HICKEY WINS IN BROOKLINE

Discovery of an error of 260 votes in tabulating Precinct 3's votes in Brookline moved William J. Hickey into second place and a seat on the Board of Selectmen today.

The error in the tabulation for the present chairman, Charles F. Rowley, dropped him from second place to third—and off the board.

When the returns were in last night and Hickey believed he had lost, he filed a petition for recount
